Nazis Again Raid London, Claim Mastery of Air

Six-Hour 'Nuisance' Attack Keeps Capital Up All Night; Germans Say War Enters 2d Phase, Destruction Of 'Militarily Vital Objectives'

The War Today

GERMAN BOMBERS, twice turned back from London Monday, return after dark and for six hours rain death and destruction on the British capital in the longest raid of the war; Monday's assaults, as deadly, as any yet hurled at Britain, range from the Channel to Ireland's coast, from Land's End to Scilly Isles. Page 1.

PLANNED DESTRUCTION of Britain's industrial power, second phase of the Battle of Britain, is already under way, the Germans claim, reporting heavy Sunday night raids on Birmingham and other factory towns. Page 1.

BRITISH BOMBERS left a huge fire in Berlin Sunday night, the R. A. F. claims, but a Monday night attack on the Nazi capital appears repulsed; other R. A. F. raiders, however, leap the Alps to Italy, and Britons tell of Sunday raids into Nazi territory more destructive than that on Berlin. Page 5.

Circle of Flame

By the Associated Press

London, (Tuesday), Aug. 27. For almost six hours the German air force hurled slaughter and destruction in and around London last night and early today in the longest air raid of the war.

The toll of property damage and casualties was inestimable but apparently heavy.

[Reliable informants said even stronger German attacks were on towns and cities in the industrial Midlands, where scores of bombs were dropped and damage was heavy, the United Press reported. However only two persons were reported killed throughout all Britain up to 4 a. m. (10 p. m. Monday, E. S. T.)]

London's clear signal came about 3:40 a. m. (9:40 p. m., Monday, Eastern a. m. (9:40 p. m., Monday, Eastern standard time), slightly more than six hours after the sirens first screeched the alarm. Publication of the exact times was not permitted, but the censor permitted word that the raid lasted past the six-hour mark.

Many watchers declared the continuous chain of circling Nazis was a deliberate maneuver—a "nuisance raid" to keep the city up all night.

Some bombs fell in fashionable residential districts as well as thickly populated working-class quarters.

A flaming ring of antiaircraft defense apparently kept the raiders from the heart of the city, but they

'Preliminaries' Over

Berlin, Aug. 26.—The Third Reich's fight to the finish against its arch foe—Britain—is said in informed quarters of Berlin now to have entered the stage of decisive action.

Any inhibitions of German aerial attacks which may have been occasioned by inclement weather, it is suggested here, will now be tossed aside, and rapid acceleration of the new phase of this war, initiated Saturday, may be expected.

It is not, however, only the Germans who are beginning to employ larger forces against the enemy in the air. It is tacitly admitted here that the intensity of the British attacks on the Reich has been considerably increased, although the Germans insist that whereas their pilots always inflict material damage on the British Isles, the British fliers are unable to do the same to the Reich.

Berlin Sounds Alarm Again

"Several" incendiary bombs on the outskirts of the city as well as numerous propaganda leaflets were, the Germans declare, all that the British fliers dropped on Berlin in Sunday night's three-hour raid.

It is rumored, however, that a number of persons were injured by shrapnel from German antiaircraft shells.

[Berlin had another alarm shortly after midnight Tuesday but, according to press association reports, no bombs were dropped and no planes were heard, although some antiaircraft fire was heard west of the city.]

The objective of the first "phase" of aerial activity against Britain, it is said here, was to gain mastery of the air over England. That has been accomplished, the Germans claim, and the second phase, which involves the systematic destruction of things vital to the enemy's defense, is under way.

Concentrated on Midlands

What the next phase will be, however, is anybody's guess, although the Germans continue to emphasize that the British are going to experience a tremendous surprise. Informed quarters here, moreover,

Temperature of 57 Sets 17-Year Low For August 26

Washingtonians kept a sharp lookout for icicles yesterday as the temperature went down to set a 17-year record for August 26 cold spells. Heavy rains drenched the city last night.

Low for the day was 57 degrees. The 1923 record was 56, according to the Weather Bureau. Shortly after noon it rose to the day's high of 73, but soon fell below 60 again.

The Police Department declared summer officially over yesterday and ordered policemen to don regulation blue caps and uniforms in place of their summer pith helmets and gray shirts.

Meanwhile, the mercury dropped to 52.7 degrees in New York, giving that city its lowest August 26 temperature in 70 years. This compared with Sunday's reading of 51.7 which gave New York its coldest August 25 in the Weather Bureau's history.

Forecast here today is cloudy with occasional rain.

'Surplus' Found As Agency Seeks $300,000 Increase In 1942 Budget

District officials yesterday revealed that there was a $29,000 unexpended balance in the direct relief budget for the past fiscal year, which ended June 30.

The disclosure came as the District Welfare Department prepared to seek a $300,000 boost in relief funds for 1941-2.

The $29,000 "surplus" was left over from a budget of $900,000. A bookkeeping error was blamed for failure to use the money in a year in which approximately 400 families had to be dropped from relief because of lack of funds.

Error Hushed Up

In the District Building, it was reported that at least one official was called on the carpet by the District Commissioners, and that steps were taken to prevent a repetition of "surplus" funds in this year's relief budget, which is also $900,000.

Officials were wary in placing the responsibility, but pointed out that the fault lay somewhere between the auditor's office and the welfare department. The error was not publicized for fear that it would have a harmful effect on the request for $300,000 additional relief funds in the forthcoming budget, now in the public hearing stage.

Neither Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, nor Robert E. Bondy, director of welfare, would comment on responsibility for the incident.

Gets Monthly Audit

Maj. Donovan, in explaining the accounting-audit system, said that the Welfare Department is provided with a complete financial statement following the close of each month. This statement shows the unexpended balance as of the date. With this balance, the Welfare Department is enabled to determine whether the relief case load of the following month may be increased or decreased, and to what extent.

In confirming the unused balance for direct relief, Maj. Donovan added that for all relief purposes here during the past year—including the $29,000 direct aid to the needy, old-age assistance, home care for dependent children, and pensions for the needy blind—$88,000 was left untouched.

The leftover $29,000, unlike the other assistance funds—which were matched by Federal grants—was available to general relief of families of unemployed. Last March approximately 400 persons, in need and jobless but classified as being employable, were dropped from the relief rolls because funds had to be conserved for families of unemployables.

731 Families Suffer

During the same year, according to Bondy, in a talk delivered last February before the Council of Social Agencies, 731 families whose only income came from relief funds were getting less than their minimum needs.

The $29,000 cannot be used for future relief purposes, but has to be diverted to the District general fund.

Welfare Director Bondy, who also confirmed the report of the "surplus," urged that the mistake not be used as an argument against his plea for a 1941-42 relief budget of $1,200,000, an increase of $300,000.

Balance-the-Budget Blues

Improvements Without Extra Taxes Demanded at Hearing

The District Commissioners yesterday heard a procession of civic witnesses recommend widespread improvements without digging into the city's pocket for more money as hearings opened on a 1942 budget of $62,907,225.

The almost unanimous contention voiced by both citizen and business spokesmen was for a balanced budget and not to spend more money than was anticipated in next year's revenues. The meeting continues today at 10 a. m. in the District Building.

Roughly, $50,000,000 is expected as revenue in 1942, yet the citizens asked for more relief money, more policemen, new health center, extension of water, sewer and highway systems and a myriad of requests made by the department heads in their individual budget estimates.

At least one supporter appeared yesterday for each of the municipal departments and provided the Commissioners with plenty of ammunition to increase these requests. Under present conditions, the only possible way the Commissioners can grant all the requests is to raise the real estate taxes to $3, or $1.25 above the present rate.

On this score, however, all but one witness was opposed to new or increased taxes. Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, said she favored a sales tax for the District as a means of providing increased revenues to take care of the "accumulated needs" of the departments.

The present budget hearings carry more weight than in previous years, due to the fact that the Federal Budget Bureau recently granted the Commissioners primary control over their own budget.

Senate Votes to Restrict Use Of Draftees to Hemisphere; Byrd Asks Defense Inquiry

Senator Cites Letters of Knox, Stimson to Show Delay on Planes

By George Bookman.
Post Staff Writer

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, challenging White House assertions that the Army and Navy have on order 6,727 planes, last night produced letters from War Secretary Stimson and Navy Secretary Knox to bolster his statement that only 343 combat planes have been ordered in the last 100 days.

A National Defense Commission report to the President earlier yesterday showed that 453 combat types have been ordered since June 1.

Byrd followed this up by proposing that the Senate create a nine-man special committee to check up on the national defense program. He put his idea in the form of a resolution and introduced it forthwith.

The Knox and Stimson letters said, as charged Saturday by Byrd, that since May 1 the Army had ordered 99 combat planes and the Navy 244, a total of 343.

Protests Delay

Publishing the Cabinet letters and proposing the investigation was the way Byrd answered a report to the President yesterday by the Defense Commission showing a total of 3,899 Army planes and 2,831 Navy planes on order August 17, date of the latest check-up.

"It is not my purpose or intention to criticize any agency of the Government," Byrd said, "but I do feel impelled to voice my protest against unreasonable delay in the acquirement of strategic military equipment.

Figures Analyzed

The commission disclosed its new figures, which Byrd then attacked, less than 48 hours after the Virginia Senator had made his original charge that only 343 combat planes were ordered in the last 100 days.

Further progress with the emergency plane program is "impossible," the commission said, until Congress passes the pending $4,800,000,000 defense appropriation bill, requested by President Roosevelt July 10.

The commission's figures, as made public at a special press conference

LaGuardia Says Ottawa Parley Will Put Monroe Doctrine in Force

By the United Press

Ottawa, Ontario, Aug. 26 Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, chairman of the American section of the Canadian-American Joint Board on Defense which held its initial meeting here today, tonight described the work of the body as "the Monroe Doctrine translated into action."

Speaking at a press interview in the American Legation, the mayor said that the board members got down to business today "in about 6½ minutes," after all preliminaries and exchanges of courtesies were finished.

"Furthermore," he said, "the language employed throughout the meeting was English. We agreed at the outset to avoid any of the cumbersome or obscure language of diplomacy or legalism and to talk in plain terms.

Our Bases, or Foes'?

"We have a common problem, a common objective. The problem boils down to this: In the face of existing world conditions, whether or not strategic points in the North American Continent are to be taken as bases for offensive operations by a potential enemy or whether these same strategic points are to be used as outposts for the defense of our hemisphere."

Asked when the board would adjourn, LaGuardian replied, "When the job is finished."

"The board realizes, of course," he continued, "that time is of the essence. Our work will not be a prolonged activity, I assure you."

Asked whether the United States would furnish munitions and supplies to Canada as a part of the joint defense arrangement, he said:

Monroe Doctrine in Action

"That is a detail, disclosure of which might give comfort to a potential enemy."

Asked if this "is an extension of the Monroe Doctrine, he replied:

"This is the Monroe Doctrine translated into action."

LaGuardia was asked if the American - Canadian understanding is to be regarded as a part of a

What Conscription Means to You

Draftees Will Get Right of Appeal

(Editor's Note: With Conscription a probability, The Post is presenting a series designed to answer everyone's questions about the effect of the draft on him. The series is based on pending legislation and the plans drawn up by selective service specialists since the World War. Questions are invited.)

By George Thorpe,
Post Staff Writer

"Which men first?"

This important question will be answered by selection boards in 48 States and the District 32 days after the President signs a conscription bill, according to the schedule of the Joint Army-Navy Selective Service Committee.

From the answers to questionnaires sent to registrants, board members will decide which men are to be placed in Class 1, those immediately available for service. All others will be deferred.

Those relegated to Classes 2, 3, and 4—respectively, because of their value to defense industries, because of dependents, miscellaneous reasons such as physical unfitness, insanity, alienage—will be out of the conscription picture, at least for the present.

But if the emergency becomes sufficiently serious, they will be called up in that order.

Finding themselves in Class 1, many registrants may question the judgment of those that put them there. What can they do

Willkie Asks Real Power for Defense Group

Time for Bunk to End, Get the Machinery Going, He Declares

By William B. Ardery
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 26.—Contending that the Roosevelt Administration "doesn't know how" to operate an effective defense program, Wendell L. Willkie recommended today that the National Defense Advisory Commission be given additional authority.

A chairman for the seven-member group, he said, should be appointed at once.

"This so-called advisory commission has two or three members of great ability and experience in production matters," he added. "But anyone with the most elementary understanding of the functioning of organizations knows that no organization can function without a head.

"You couldn't run a peanut stand if you had five employes with no directing head who could devote himself to the business."

Saying that "it is time for bunk and conversation to end and time to get the machinery going," the Republican Presidential nominee declared that Mr. Roosevelt should delegate substantial authority to the Defense Commission and that any necessary statutory authority also should be provided.

"No President, no matter how able, with all his other duties," he

Dies Will Ask Roosevelt to Oust Officials

Links Congressmen, And Perhaps Senator, To Alien Activities

By the United Press

New York, Aug. 26.—President Roosevelt will be asked to help oust certain key governmental officials who allegedly have supported subversive organizations, Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Committee Investigating un-American Activities, announced tonight.

Dies, conducting a star-chamber investigation here, said he would forward Mr. Roosevelt the names of persons holding important governmental positions who have contributed money or speeches or in other ways supported groups "under the direct or indirect control of foreign governments."

"We have information," he added, "of a few Congressmen and perhaps a Senator who have used information obtained from 'Facts In Review,' a Nazi publication published here in New York."

This information will be included in a letter to the President tomorrow, asking support for a bill to be introduced by Dies outlawing subversive organizations, the chairman said. He added that he plans to write Wendell Willkie at the same time to learn the Republican Presidential candidate's attitude toward organizations controlled by foreign governments.

He refused to name any of the governmental officials allegedly

Limit Is Passed By 67-to-4 Vote As Night Session Hurries Action

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Senate late yesterday voted to bar men drafted under the pending conscription bill from being sent to fight in European or Asiatic wars.

By a vote of 67 to 4 the upper house wrote a restriction into the draft measure confining the use of conscripted troops to the Western Hemisphere, American possessions, the Canal Zone and the Philippines.

In an effort of speed action on the bill, the Senate held one of its rare night sessions. Remaining in session nearly around the clock—until after 10 p. m.—the Senators disposed of virtually all pending amendments and cleared the way for a vote on two proposed substitute bills and the measure itself perhaps late today.

Trial for Enlistment

The substitute measures would set up draft machinery, but defer any call until war or until a three-month trial of voluntary enlistments has proved unsuccessful in raising the necessary troops.

Just before voting a curb on use of the drafters a more restrictive amendment, limiting the use of men called for service under the bill to the continental United States and American possessions was defeated, 29 to 32. Administration leaders opposed the latter proposal, offered by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, but threw their support behind the hemispheric limitation, proposed by Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts.

Barkley Opposes Measure

Majority Leader Barkley took the floor to call for defeat of the Clark amendment, declaring:

"It would be very unfortunate for us to serve notice on the world that we will sit on our front porch and wait for an attack against the United States when some nation goes into South America."

Earlier in the day, War Department plans for creating a huge Army of 4,030,000 trained Regulars, National Guardsmen and Reserves by 1944 under the conscription pro-

House Unit Agrees On Excess Profits Tax Measure

Breaking a legislative log jam on the excess profits bill, a House Ways and Means subcommittee yesterday agreed on a measure which is expected to speed up the rearmament program.

The bill, which may be taken up in the House this week, would couple rates ranging from 20 to 60 per cent on excess profits with provision for rapid amortization of new national defense plants and suspension of the Vinson-Trammell Act limitations on shipbuilding and airplane profits.

Sigrid Undset Arrives in U. S.

San Francisco, Aug. 26 (AP).—Sigrid Undset, Norwegian novelist and Nobel Prize winner, arrived today as a refugee, accompanied by her 21-year-old son, Hans. She said she would undertake a lecture tour.

The novelist fled from Norway to Stockholm and thence across Russia.

Stork Outraces Ambulance; Babe, Mother Doing Well

The stork and an ambulance had a race here yesterday; the 19-year-old ambulance attendant turned doctor, the driver made a quick decision at 60 miles an hour, and the mother and baby, a boy, are doing well.

The Chambers ambulance was summoned to 1230 Eleventh street northwest to take Mrs. Valerie Armbruster to Columbia Hospital. En route, the baby was born.

Nineteen-year-old Harold Hollen, 335 W street northeast, the ambulance attendant, had taken a course in first aid—hardly preparation for yesterday's circumstances. He started doing what he could, however.

"It was very new to me," he explained.

At the wheel was George D. Slaby, 41, of 4612 New Hampshire avenue northwest, who had started out for Columbia Hospital.

The baby began crying.

Any hospital in a squawl, thought Slaby, and took the first one he saw, Garfield.

2 Natty Gunmen Rob Plaza Hotel, Flee With $300

Two well dressed middle-aged gunmen held up the night clerk and two bellhops at the Plaza Hotel last night, padlocked the lobby doors behind them and fled with almost $300 in cash, eluding a score of policemen who converged on the scene.

Police, racing to the hotel at 331 First street northeast in radio cars, altered their direction after an anonymous 'phone call informed headquarters that the men were hiding in Shotts alley, between First and Second, C and D streets northeast.

Ten detectives and an equal number of uniformed men surrounded the alley's four exits, but discovered nothing.

The clerk, Tom H. Junkin, 28, of 2701 Fourteenth street northwest, told police the gunmen forced him to turn over the contents of two cash drawers.

Stimson Names Crowell as Aide

Benedict Crowell, who was Assistant Secretary of War and director of munitions during the World War, was appointed by Secretary of War Stimson yesterday as a special consultant on defense.

A brigadier general in the Ordnance Reserve, Crowell is president of the Central National Bank in Cleveland, Ohio.

Immediately after Stimson became Secretary of War, he asked Gen. Crowell to make a preliminary survey of the defense program, the War Department said yesterday. In his new position, Crowell will continue the survey and his consultations with Stimson.

3,600,000 Must Report

Listing of Aliens Begins Today; D. C. Postoffices Set for Rush

The Nation today will begin its first complete roll call of all aliens living in the United States and its possessions.

Preparations for the gigantic registration, ordered by Congress as one of America's first defense measures, were all set last night in every large center for alien residents, including Washington, Justice Department officials said.

Aliens have from 9 a. m. today until the day after Christmas to tell the Government who they are, where they live, what they are doing. Part of the information they will be required to furnish is a complete set of fingerprints.

If they fail to register they face a $1,000 fine, six months in prison, or both. If they misinform the Government, they may face the added penalty of deportation.

The registration and fingerprinting will be done at 7,300 postoffices throughout the country and their branches, where postal employes have been trained and assigned to aid the aliens in filling out questionnaires, and to take the fingerprints. During the four-month registration period, officials said, there will be 100 days when aliens can go to the postoffices.

Earl G. Harrison, director of registration for the Justice Department, said that about 10,000,000 blanks have been distributed for the job, along with fingerprinting equipment for all the large alien centers and most of the smaller ones.

He said that the 1930 census figures, along with estimates on the number of aliens entering and leaving the country during the past ten years, showed that about 3,600,000 aliens will have to be counted. This will mean, he pointed out, that an average of 36,000 persons will have to register daily.

In most large cities, he said, registration in the postoffices will go on from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., and special arrangements will be made to poll aliens who are bedridden or pre-

Over the Coffee

DEMAGOGUES' DELIGHT

Few debates have ever given the past masters of demogoging such a field day as the Senate's conscription debate . . . Several argue loudly against it who will vote for it . . . Thus they will half please all their constituents . . . Their arguments are often so hollow that even their home town papers don't print 'em.

Harlan Miller

Walsh, of Massachusetts, is shedding great alligator tears of oratory, screwing his big, gutta-percha face into a hundred melodramatic grimaces . . . A bachelor, he weeps lest one brief year of Army service prevent young men from marrying and raising families.

It doesn't take forever, Senator . . . You can begin at almost any age.

Reynolds, with an indignant tremolo, tells of the recruiting sergeant he met on the street, who told him the Army doesn't encourage one-year enlistments . . . He talks as if the sergeant knows more about the Army's needs than the Secretary of War, who has already told him the same thing.

* * * *

Wisconsin's Wiley matches half-truths with Ickes, and calls Willkie "a great American" . . . Already? . . . The galleries wonder if that's premonition, prophecy, or a little premature . . . Elmer Thomas saunters in, resplendent in his yellow pants, and listens, a little disgusted.

"—a Hitler in short pants"

The Senators do not listen very attentively, except those watching like hawks for a chance to break in with some devastating alarm . . . They are reading the papers, looking at cartoons of Ickes as a Hitler in short pants, at caricatures of Willkie as a simple, barefoot Wall street lawyer.

* * * *

But wait! Holt, enjoying his last lame duck days in the Senate to the fullest, like a naughty, slightly billious cupid, has just read in his paper that the Secretary of the Treasury has a Coast Guard plane to fly around on inspection trips . . . Holt leaps to his feet, seemingly convinced that the Secretary of the Treasury is the last man who ought to be granted the use of an airplane.

* * * *

Half a dozen Senators are on their feet, clamoring for Holt to yield; they've thought of something cute, too, also remotely connected with national defense and conscription . . . It looks wanly like a filibuster, but it isn't . . . It's merely free debate; or thinly disguised campaigning for votes on the floor of the Senate.

* * * *

"I'll yield to the man with the loudest voice," says Rush Holt . . . He stands teetering on his feet, waiting for the other Senators to talk themselves out so he can resume his right to the floor.

* * * *

Wheeler sits darkly, the master of the ominous threat, his brow cupped in his hands, a statue of brooding statecraft, disconsolate to hear others botching the job.

"—denounces a barefoot lawyer"

A-ha! Reynolds is in again. He stalks dramatically across the floor amid the desks, lithely gesturing, half at his colleagues, half at the galleries. He talks against the conscription bill, but the odds are strong he will vote for it.

* * * *

"Will we have to conscript 4,000,000 men to eject Harry Bridges from the United States?" he asks oratorically.

Then he saunters majestically from the floor, with one last glance at the ladies' gallery, out perhaps to sneer at a dish of caviar.

* * * *

What now! Holt has found another item in his newspaper, and he shares his discovery aloud. The Navy is buying some silver knives and forks and 5,000 finger bowls . . . There's preparedness for you! There's national defense!

* * * *

"When Hitler comes over here," he says, with two-ton sarcasm, "each soldier can grab a finger bowl and drown one of the invading soldiers in it."

Of course, Congress appropriated the money for the finger bowls.

And here's Senator Bennett Clark with a jewel of an argument; a whisker, a nifty, a veritable gem. . . . He reads something from the statutes to prove that Ambassador Bullitt is liable to a $500 fine for making a speech.

Of course, it proves nothing of the sort, and he knows it, and every child in the gallery realizes it as he reads . . . But for the moment it sounds great.

* * * *

And so the debate on national defense goes . . . Senator Holt cannot finish his argument today; he must go on and finish it tomorrow, maybe . . . What it all has to do with American defense only he knows.

But if it will make him happier when he retires to his West Virginia fastness, a has-been at 36, what is a little delay, a little danger to the country?

Tobin Resigns White House Job

To Take Charge Of Getting Labor Vote for Democrats

Daniel J. Tobin, A. F. of L. teamsters' chief, who has been an administrative assistant to President Roosevelt for the past two months, resigned his White House job yesterday to take charge of marshaling the labor vote for the Democratic Party this fall.

Tobin, who served the Democrats in a similar capacity in 1932 and again in 1936, will head the Democratic National Committee's labor bureau.

While in Washington he assisted President Roosevelt with labor problems incident to the defense program.

He resigned the $10,000-a-year job, which he had held only a short while, telling the President that "the enemies of labor" must be defeated in November.

Text of Tobin's Letter And Roosevelt's Reply

By the Associated Press

The text of Daniel J. Tobin's letter of resignation as administrative assistant to President Roosevelt, and the President's reply:

My Dear Mr. President:

Some time ago you appointed me to the position of administrative assistant. After considering the entire matter, and my own surroundings and responsibilities, I felt it my duty, as it would be the duty of any loyal citizen, to comply with your request.

At that time there was considerable misunderstanding between the representatives of the two labor groups, and there was a possibility of our National defense program being delayed, or seriously obstructed, unless harmony and a better understanding prevailed.

In accordance with your desires, I proceeded to establish negotiations with the representatives of the American Federation of Labor, with the result that at this time there is a beter feeling obtaining and most of the misunderstandings have been eliminated. Our program of National defense is going along as well as can be expected and labor, in all of its many branches, is working together to the end that our Government may proceed with the the proper protection of our defense preparations necessary for the proper protection of our country.

I now feel that there is another call on my services which I cannot honorably set aside.

During the last two political national campaigns, 1932 and 1936, I acted as chairman of the labor division of the National Democratic Campaign Committee. During those campaigns I had the cooperation, assistance and good will of nearly all of the responsible labor leaders of our country. The record shows that there were no objections from anyone in labor as to my actions and services in those campaigns. The toilers of the Nation almost unanimously answered our appeal, and their actions speak for themselves. Those campaigns are now history.

We are now confronted with another national campaign and election. If the enemies of labor are successful in electing their candidates it is possible, and probable, that the toilers of the Nation may lose the advantages they have gained from humanitarian representatives and leaders in our Government. In addition to this, there is the great danger confronting the Nation as a whole, resulting from the awful, ever-threatening conflict between the nations of Europe.

Due to this condition, I have been requested by the national chairman of the Democratic Committee to again assume the position of Labor's representative in the national Democratic campaign. I am fully conversant with this arduous work and know something of the energetic labor required, having gone through it during the two previous campaigns, but above and beyond all this is the danger confronting labor and the Nation. I feel, Mr. President, that I would not be true to the working people, with whom I am associated and employed, nor would I be loyal to my country, were I to refuse to serve in answer to the call referred to above.

I therefore, earnestly but reluctantly, request you to release me and accept my resignation as administrative assistant, to take effect not later than September 9, 1940.

Very sincerely yours,

DANIEL J. TOBIN.

Dear Dan:

I have your letter of August 23 in which you advise me that Ed Flynn has asked you to again assume the position of labor's representative in the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee for the duration of the campaign. I have no alternative and therefore I reluctantly accept your resignation as administrative assistant to the President, effective September 9, 1940.

Ed's gain is my loss!

I congratulate him for securing your services. At the same time, I console myself with the knowledge that while you leave me in Washington, we shall continue, as you have so well said, "working together to the end that our Government may proceed with the defense preparations necessary for the protection of our country."

You report that the program of national defense is going along as well as can be expected and labor, in all of its many branches, is working together; there is a better feeling obtaining and most of the misunderstandings have been eliminated. For this, I am most grateful and none can tell the value of the contribution you have made to your country and its Government.

I will continue to count on your advice on all matters affecting labor and Government, with particular relationship to national defense.

As ever yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

PLANS ARE SET—Task of registering and fingerprinting 3,600,000 aliens begins today and the Government is "completely ready," in the larger cities, Earl C. Harrison (left), director of registration, said yesterday. He is explaining the registration plan to Solicitor General Francis Biddle vented by their jobs from coming in to register.

Alien Registry Begins Today

In Washington, Postmaster Vincent Burke has urged that aliens register, if possible, at the main postoffice, North Capitol and Massachusetts avenue northeast, or the Benjamin Franklin branch, Thirteenth and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Extra facilities have been arranged there for the registration, the hours being 9 a. m. to 8 p. m. Monday through Friday, 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. Saturday.

The same hours will be kept at the Bethesda branch, Wisconsin avenue and Montgomery lane, and the Park Road branch, 1413 Park road northwest.

Other local postoffice branches, where aliens will be able to register from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. weekdays, and 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. Saturdays, include:

The actual process of registering will take at least 20 minutes or half an hour per person, he said. Many aliens have received samples of the registration blanks to aid them in having their answers ready when they go to the postoffices. The official registration forms, however, will have to be filled out at the postoffice, and the fingerprints taken there.

To Get Receipt Cards

Harrison said that receipt cards, proof of registration, will be sent back to aliens within a week after they register.

Under the registration law, every alien over 14 must register in person; those under 14 must be registered by parents or legal guardians. The latter group does not have to be fingerprinted, and they need answer only 9 of the 15 questions. Would-be citizens who have taken out their first naturalization papers must be registered like noncitizens. An alien may register at any postoffice where the registration is being handled, not necessarily in his own community.

The questions cover personal identification, manner of entry into this country, occupation, other activities during the past five years, military service, arrest record, and any activity in promoting the interests of foreign governments. The registration and fingerprint data will be filed with the Justice Department and kept confidential, although a cross-check may be made against criminal or other records.

McNary to Accept Nomination Today At Salem, Oreg.

By the Associated Press

Salem, Oreg., Aug. 26.—Senator Charles L. McNary was host to neighbors and Republican leaders today despite his appeal for a day of rest before the official ceremonies notifying him of his nomination as Republican Vice Presidential candidate.

He had begged friends to wait until Wednesday to call on him so he would have time to tramp over the 258-acre farm where he was born 66 years ago, but so many persons turned up at Fir Cone the Senator was kept busy all day.

The arrangements committee rushed work on seating facilities at the State fair grounds where McNary will make his acceptance speech before an expected crowd of 50,000 to 75,000 persons tomorrow. Salem's 30,000 population was doubled.

Charges that President Roosevelt will be guilty of acts of a "brazen" dictator unless he submits for Senate ratification the new Canadian-American defense "alliance" were made yesterday by Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts.

"The immediate and imperative business of the people of the United States is "not to put down dictatorship in Europe or Asia, but to put down dictatorship here and now with a heavy hand," Tinkham declared.

"This is not the first time that President Roosevelt has secretly negotiated an alliance with a foreign power."

Tinkham, a veteran on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, referred to the secret agreement Mr. Roosevelt made with England for the joint control of strategically located islands in the Pacific to which Winston Churchill referred in a recent speech to the British Parliament.

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated William E. Rhea, of Missouri, to be a Land Bank commissioner in the Farm Credit Administration.

Rhea, whose home is at Hale, Mo., was named to succeed Roy Green, who resigned to become president of Colorado State Agricultural College.

The appointment of Tracy Welling, executive officer of the Utah Farm Bureau Federation, as an Assistant Secretary of Agriculture was proposed to President Roosevelt yesterday by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah.

King said he stressed the importance of naming a man from the intermountain States who would bring to the department a knowledge of that region's agricultural and reclamation problems.

Congress Waiver Sought for Jones

White House to Ask Law Permitting Him To Join Cabinet

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

The White House last night offered to sponsor special legislation to enable Jesse Jones to serve as both Secretary of Commerce and Federal Loan administrator.

The White House announcement followed speculation on whether Jones would relinquish control over Federal lending to accept the Cabinet post left vacant last week by Harry L. Hopkins.

Presidential Press Secretary Stephen T. Early indicated Jones would accept. He said the Federal loan administrator was "very anxious" to become Secretary of Commerce. He asked for the job and was given a "lien" on it before Hopkins resigned, according to Early.

Awaits Jones' Return

A Congressional resolution waiving, in Jones' special case, existing bans on dual Federal office will be presented by President Roosevelt when Jones returns from vacationing in Harbor Springs, Mich., shortly after Labor Day.

Previously Jones had been reported unwilling to accept the Commerce portfolio unless his existing lending authority was continued, and a Congreasonal move to confirm him for both posts was quietly under way.

Milo R. Perkins, associate AAA administrator, AAA director of marketing, and president of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, was reported originally under consideration for the Federal loan job. Perkins developed the Administration's food stamp plan and attended the Havana Pan American Conference as a special economic adviser.

Disclosure that Jones will be retained in the lending post if Congress concurs set at rest rumors that the former Houston banker was being kicked upstairs to ease him out of the Federal loan agency.

"Reward" for Past Services

His friends at the Capitol said they regarded his selection as a "reward" for past services in the RFC. Jones was among the Democratic Vice Presidential prospects whose names were withdrawn at Chicago in favor of Wallace. In other quarters, the White House action was regarded as a concession to conservative elements in the party, who resented Hopkins' domination of the Chicago third-term show.

In announcing the President's decision to continue Jones in a dual capacity, Early said his nomination will not be sent to Congress until the special resolution is adopted.

No permanent merger of the Federal loan agency under the Commerce Department is contemplated, although the President at one time favored such a consolidation. But the two agencies during Jones' administration would operate under central control.

Farley Successor Unnamed

Early offered no cue to expected shifts in the President's official family. James A. Farley's resignation as Postmaster General becomes effective Saturday and the President has not named a successor. The name of Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt yesterday figured along with that of Frank C. Walker for the Postoffice post. Senator James M. Mead, of New York, meantime announced he is no longer a candidate for Postmaster General. He said his campaign plans for reelection to the Senate are now too far advanced to consider such an offer, were it made.

Southern Women Seek Removal of Poll Tax

APPEAL MADE ON SUFFRAGE ANNIVERSARY—Twenty years ago women were given the right to vote through the Nineteenth Amendment. Beneath the statue of the suffrage leader, Susan B. Anthony, in the Capitol, 100 prominent Southern women yesterday indorsed a declaration calling on Congress to remove poll tax requirements in States so that millions of women can exercise that right. Mrs. William T. Gayle, jr., presented the statement to Representative Geyer, of California.

Dixie Women Ask Congress To Remove State Poll Taxes

Headed by Mrs. William T. Gayle, jr., of Atlanta, Ga., a group of women from the Southern poll tax States yesterday observed the twentieth anniversary of the Woman Suffrage Amendment by presenting at the Capitol a declaration calling on Congress for removal of State poll tax requirements for voting. Millions of women in those States are unable to exercise their franchise because of it they said.

Presentation of the declaration was made to Representative Lee E. Geyer, of California, sponsor of the anti-poll tax bill, before the statue of Susan B. Anthony on the main floor of the Capitol.

The suffrage anniversary also was celebrated by the Womans' Centennial Congress at the New York World's Fair Court of Peace. Messages were read from suffrage leaders, including Carrie Chapman Catt. Mrs. Catt, as president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, led the suffrage forces to victory 20 years ago.

Pointing out what has happened in the German-dominated countries of Europe, Mrs. Catt declared: "In all of these except France, women had the vote. If Germany continues in control, there will be no parliaments and consequently no free vote to either men or women in those countries. Every American should be grateful that he is privileged to live in this country where liberty is still granted."

Representative Mary T. Norton contrasted the 11,000,000 women in American industry today with the half a million 20 years ago. She paid tribute to President Roosevelt for his appointment of women to high posts in the Government.

$10,000,000 Given Navy for Housing

RFC Will Boost Fund to Shelter Defense Workers

By Edward Ryan

The Navy has arranged to take $10,000,000 from the President's emergency defense fund, run it up to $50,000,000 through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and get some defense housing projects started, it was learned yesterday.

This move was disclosed a few hours after the National Defense Advisory Commission asked Congress for $150,000,000 to start a housing program for defense workers, to be handled by the Public Buildings Administration.

The two plans were the first concrete measures put forward through the office of Charles Palmer, new housing coordinator for the Defense Commission, and they came as a surprise to officials in other agencies which have been competing for the lead role in the defense housing program.

"Blank Check" Funds

Budget officials said that President Roosevelt had allocated $10,000,000 to the Navy out of the $200,000,000 in "blank check" funds which Congress gave him for defense purposes. With this amount, it was understood, the RFC Mortgage Co. is prepared to finance up to $50,000,000 in emergency dwelling construction, to be put up by private builders.

Main purpose of the special grant, officials said, was to permit an immediate start on construction in areas where the President finds an acute shortage of housing for defense workers, until a Congressional appropriation could be made for extra defense dwellings.

The second plan, to give the Public Buildings Administration, headed by W. E. Reynolds, a $150,000,000 appropriation for defense housing, startled officials even in the Federal Works Agency, parent of the PBA, and its other member organizations.

Others Sought Work

Within the Federal works set-up, two other agencies, the United States Housing Authority and the Public Works Administration, have been seeking to take a big hand in the defense housing program. The USHA, headed by Nathan Straus, has already started 19 housing projects for the War and Navy Departments with funds "recaptured" from other slow-moving projects. In addition, it is seeking $250,000,000 from Congress to finance more defense housing, a program which Congress approved in a Navy speed-up bill.

USHA, however, has been under fire from Capitol Hill, and the Navy, it was understood, took its housing problems to the Public Buildings Administration. The latter, incidentally, is the current home of the old United States Housing Corporation, a World War relic which has been lodged in three agencies within three years, and now takes the attention of three employes.

The Public Building Administration's experience with the New Deal's extensive program of the new Government buildings, rather than its possession of the wartime housing corporation, brought the Navy planners there for help. PBA has put up all types of buildings, from prisons to offices and embassies. They already have started drawing up housing plans for the Navy, officials said.

Need for USHA Help

The proposal for their $150,000,000 program would give the Federal Works administrator, acting through the public buildings agency, power to acquire any needed land through purchase, gift or condemnation.

Aides of USHA Administrator Straus said that even with plans to assign defense housing work to the Public Buildings Administration there would still be need for the USHA to help in the complete program.

Storm Over Chat With Wheeler Perturbs Sir George Paish

Only Helped Get U. S. In Last War, British Economist Says

Sir George Paish, a 72-year-old British economist, was neck-deep last night in the Senate draft bill debate and in national notoriety for telling Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, what he believes—that the United States ought to enter the war.

The wiry, apple-cheeked writer was dismayed at what happened after he had "a little chat" with the Montana statesman.

Senator Wheeler yesterday asserted on the Senate floor that Sir George said to him:

"I am responsible for getting this country into the last war and I intend to get it into this one."

Immediately Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, and Senator Lundeen, (Farmer Labor), of Minnesota demanded that the British visitor be deported as a foreign agent. He is not registered with the State Department.

In an interview with The Post last night at the Wardman Park Hotel where he has been staying since mid-July, Sir George insisted that Wheeler did not quote him quite correctly.

"What I said was that I am the man who helped get this country into the last war and I intend to present the facts to the American people and let them decide if they should get into this war."

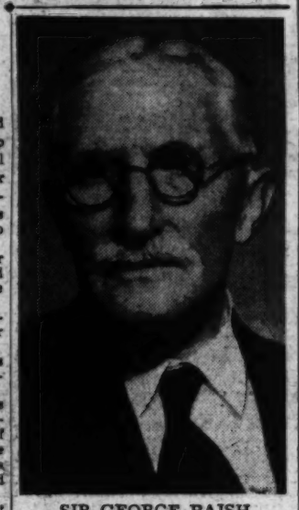
Sir George said that, in his view, the facts of the situation could point to only one conclusion—that the United States ought to enter the war.

"I am over here only to present the facts," said the mild-looking man who was an economic advisor to the British treasury in 1916.

In the interests of "presenting the facts," Sir George said that he has seen President Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull, eight Senators, several Representatives, and that he intends to deliver a series of lectures throughout the country after the election campaigns.

The British Embassy last night was not grateful for the efforts of Sir George to "present the facts."

A telephone call from the embassy interrupted Sir George's interview with The Post, telling him to grant no more interviews. Nevertheless, a few minutes later the telephone rang again and Sir George gave a correspondent for a Midwestern paper his views on the European war.



SIR GEORGE PAISH
Had a "Little Chat"

An embassy spokesman later said to The Post:

"We wish someone would drop Sir George Paish over Germany as a pamphlet."

Sir George's interview with President Roosevelt, which the Britisher described as "very satisfactory," was arranged by Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University.

40 Stores Here To Resume Work On Saturdays

Employes of 40-odd retail stores in the District will resume regular hours next Saturday, according to Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

The stores, according to custom, were closed eight Saturdays during July and August to give employes long summer week-ends.

Four business houses, Mr. Shaw said, will continue summer hours until September 7. They are W. & J. Sloane, the E. Morrison Paper Co., George F. Muth & Co., and the Potomac Electric Power Co. Two others, the R. P. Andrews Co. and Charles G. Stott & Co., will remain closed after 1 p. m. on Saturdays until September 14.

Coal and fuel oil yards will resume regular hours a week from Saturday. All stores will be closed Labor Day, Shaw said.

Profits Tax Bill Ready for House

Revised Measure Gets Unanimous Vote Of Subcommittee

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

A revised tax bill designed to curb "excess profits" arising from the rearmament boom was unanimously approved by the Ways and Means Committee of the House yesterday.

The tripartite measure, which may be taken up in the House itself Thursday, would couple rates ranging from 20 to 50 per cent on "excess profits" with provision for rapid amortization of new "national defense" plans and suspension of the Vinson - Trammell Act limiting profits on warship and airplane contracts.

The proposed tax would yield well over $300,000,000 this year, according to rough estimates, and $500,000,000 to $700,000,000 in 1941 and 1942.

Complete subcommittee agreement on the intricate and controversial bill, followed closely the statement of John D. Biggers of the Defense Commission Friday urging speedy enactment of the measure.

Principal revision yesterday of the proposals that had been tentatively agreed on by the subcommittee nearly three weeks ago lay in redrafting of the rates, both as to amount and method of application.

Alternate Methods Provided

The bill provides alternate methods of determining excess profits—one based on the invested capital of the taxed corporation, and the other based on the corporation's average earnings. If the "invested capital" method is chosen, the rates rise from 20 per cent on the first $40,000 excess, to 45 per cent if the excess is over $500,000; while under the "average earnings" method, the rates range from 25 to 50 per cent.

The base period employed in both cases covers the four years, 1936 to 1939, but in computing average earnings over this period, if one or more of the years show a deficit, one deficit year may be taken as zero.

Also easing the burden is a provision for a flat $5,000 exemption on excess profits—which means that only about 70,000 of the Nation's 475,000 corporations will be subject to any excess profits tax at all.

Under the bill as approved yesterday, corporations choosing the average earnings method to compute their excess profits tax will be required to pay an additional 4.1 per cent on their normal corporation tax—bringing their total normal tax to 25 per cent.

Expected to Speed Contracts

The Vinson-Trammell Act suspension and amortization features of the bill, which had been agreed on early this month, are expected to quicken the pace of armament contracts. Under the terms of the measure, manufacturers would be permitted to deduct from their income 20 per cent annually of the cost of new plant facilities necessitated by national defense contracts.

The loss to the Government from suspension of the Vinson-Trammell profit limitations is, of course, expected to be recouped through operation of the general excess profits levy.

Corporations choosing the average earnings methods of determining excess profits would simply deduct the average for the base period from the profits for the taxable year. The balance, minus the $5,000 exemption, would be the excess.

Under the invested capital method, corporations would be allowed as exemption (in addition to the $5,000) whatever percentage of their capital they earned during the base period, with a minimum of 7 per cent for the first $500,000 capital, and 5 per cent after that—but with a maximum exemption of 10 per cent, after which the excess profits rates would apply, no matter what previous earnings had been.

All Mail Sent Through Lisbon Falls to Bermuda Censors

Clippers and American Export Liners Pause at British Isle on Trips West; Hull Stands Firm in Opposition

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 26.—All European mail routed through Lisbon today appeared to be passing through the "bottleneck" of Bermuda censorship despite Secretary of State Hull's repeated opposition to the seizure of American mail by the British.

Chief carriers of mails between Lisbon and New York are Pan American Airways planes and the ships of the American Export Line.

It was reported that 842 mail bags had been removed from American ships at Hamilton in the past 18 days. The line obtained permission from the United States Maritime Commisison early in August to make stops at Bermuda and the Azores.

The Associated Press was unable today to obtain a statement from officials of the line as to their reasons for including the Bermuda call in the New York-Lisbon service. The ships do not carry passengers traveling only between Bermuda and New York, but can carry passengers between Lisbon and the island.

Routine Matter

In Washington the Maritime Commission said the request for permission to call at Bermuda was handled as a routine shipping matter.

Pan American Airways officials said today that pilots of their Atlantic clippers would continue to avoid Bermuda, except in case of adverse weather or mechanical trouble.

Since May 18, when Pan American canceled regular stops at Hamilton—presumably because of the censorship—clipper planes have made 30 stops at the island in 86 Atlantic crossings.

Pan American's statement followed announcement Saturday by Secretary Hull that this Government had consistently opposed seizure and censorship of the mails for any purpose and that this continued to be the American position.

An average of 50 per cent of the clipper mail loads, 1,000 to 2,000 pounds, has been taken off by the censors.

Pan American's Dixie clipper arrived at LaGuardia Field today after a day's delay in Bermuda, caused by propeller trouble. During the stop-over, British censors examined the clipper's 2,000-pound mail cargo but replaced "nearly all" the bags before the take-off for New York, it was said.

Duke of Guise Dies; French Pretender

Urged Monarchy To Save Republic From Dictatorship

By the Associated Press

Larache, Spanish Morocco, Aug. 26.—The Duke of Guise, 66-year-old exiled pretender to the French throne, who for years warned his countrymen that a monarchy was the alternative to collapse and dictatorship, died here today.

Royalists and prominent townsmen were admitted to the ducal palace tonight to file by his bier, surrounded by his wife, Princess Isabelle, and one daughter, Princess Francoise of Greece.

Burial will be tomorrow in the old cemetery of Larache.

The duke issued several manifestos calling for monarchical rule in the years of exile spent here and at his villa near Brussels. Until France's military collapse last June and the rise of the authoritarian regime of Marshal Petain, his claims did not attract widespread attention.

Count to Carry On

Since then observers have speculated that the Petain regime might be only a temporary one aimed at restoring the monarchy. The present French government is rightist, and Defense Minister Gen. Maxime Weygand is known to be sympathetic to the royalists.

The Duke's only son, the Count of Paris, now is expected to assume the responsibilities of the pretender.

Throughout most of his life the duke was content to be a gentleman farmer, with estates in France and Spanish Morocco.

In 1933, however, seven years after the death of his cousin, Duke Philippe of Orleans, had placed him in the role of "Chief of the House of France," he issued a manifesto calling for "dictatorship under the monarchy."

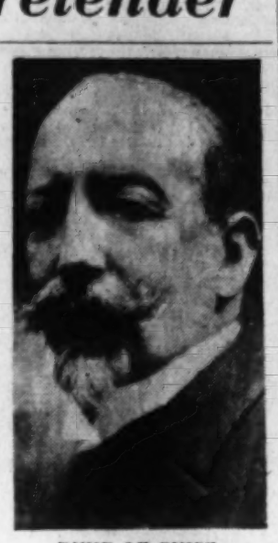
Bloody Rioting Flares

A year later there was bloody rioting in the Place de la Concorde in Paris, in which young royalists joined with shouts of "Vive le Roi!" (long live the king).

"The republic cannot go on like this," one of the duke's spokesmen said. "The next logical step might be a dictator. But we have no Mussolini, no Hitler. Why not then a return to the monarchy?"

In November, 1937, the duke issued another manifesto, announcing he had decided to "reconquer the throne of my fathers."

He denounced communism, fascism and the French parliamentary system, and advocated a conference table solution of labor problems.



DUKE OF GUISE, pretender to the nonexistent throne of France, died yesterday in Larache, Spanish Morocco. He was 66

Vanderbilt Tells Of German Hold On South America

Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., went to 11 Central and South American countries and saw enough in a five-week investigation to convince him the Nazis are deeply intrenched.

VANDERBILT

He heard them singing the Horst Wessel song in Mexico, he said yesterday in Washington, and in the South American republics. On a road one day he met a young girl, her head burdened with a big basket. Vanderbilt talked with her.

"What had you rather have than anything else in the world?" he inquired.

"A pair of wedgies" (type of shoe), she said.

He promised to send her some. But she told him it wasn't any use to bother so.

"I can get some from the German embassy," she said.

Any candidate can appeal from a selection board decision, as can the Government. There will be an appeal board for approximately every 600,000 of population.

To the end of avoiding injustice, advisory legal and medical boards will assist the selection units in classification. Qualified specialists will advise on doubtful physical cases and expert lawyers will guard against favoritism or corruption.

But if he thinks the decision incorrect for any reason, a registrant can take his case to the appeal board, even to the President.

It is nevertheless clear that the appeal prerogative will not afford an easy "out" for draft dodgers.

A statement in this regard by the Selective Service Committee declares:

"While every registrant is entitled to fair treatment, including review of his case by the appeal board, the program is not going to wait until every slacker resorts to endless appeals . . . After all he owes military duty . . . and deferment is an act of grace by the Government."

Then the General Call

As it finishes classifying its registrants, each local board will report the total of Class I men to the State or District of Columbia Selective Service executive, who will report the number in turn to the national director. Now the system is ready for the "general call."

According to present plans the first call will be for 400,000 men. National headquarters will assign a quota to each State and the Capital.

Washington serves as a typical example of how this will operate. It has been estimated there are 60,000 men, 21 to 31, the draft age in the favorably reported Senate bill, now living in the District. About 20,000 of these will be of Class 1 caliber.

Applying the national ratio (400,000 out of 4,500,000) here, military men expect every eleventh man to be picked from local Class 1 registrants for the first draft. On this basis, it is assumed, somewhat more than 1,800 Washingtonians will be inducted into the Army. (These estimates are necessarily only approximate.)

At first, selection experts say, all trainees will go to the Army. Later, however, the local boards will find themselves authorized not only to select conscripts but decide to which of the three service branches they are to be assigned. Here again the boards will use their wide discretionary power.

Will Allot Draftees

For example, a dozen Class 1 registrants may answer the summons to a selection board. Officials will have the problem of allotting nine of them to the Army, two to the Navy and one to the Marine Corps.

Undoubtedly the men will be given an opportunity to express a choice. If they do not volunteer as required they will then be given a chance to decide among themselves. But if they then are not able to agree the board will have to use its discretion.

Special qualifications will be taken into consideration. If one of the draftees is an amateur yachtsman he will be inducted into the Navy, in all probability, while a rifle expert, valuable as an infantryman, will find himself headed for the Army or Marine Corps.

Can a man in a deferred class who would have been passed over in the general call be drafted if he has particular qualifications?

Yes. Special calls will be issued by State selective service directors as the services find themselves shorthanded in specialized lines. Should an exceptionally skilled chemist be needed by the Chemical Warfare Service, for example, volunteers will be called for.

If none answer from among the Class 1 registrants not yet conscripted, Class 2 and Class 3 men will be called upon. In the case of a deferred man, however, he must file a waiver to the effect his induction will work no hardships on a dependent.

Then Physical Exams

Thirty-seven days after passage the selective service executive here will notify those selected from Class 1 registrants to report for a physical examination, the last step before induction. The examination, selection committeemen say, will be a rigid one. Since the emergency is still limited, the services can afford to take only the physically perfect.

In the World War the greatest percentage of men rejected for physical reasons were those with defective eyesight—21.6 per cent. Other reasons for physical rejections ranged from nervous disorders to extreme underweight. The greatest rejection percentages were as follows: Teeth, 8.5 per cent; hernia, 7.4 per cent; ear trouble, 5.9 per cent; tuberculosis, 3.3 per cent, and mentally deficient, 4.5 per cent.

General Army requirements call for men not less than 5 feet nor more than 6 feet 6 inches in height. The weight minimum is 107 pounds and obese men are barred.

His physical examination passed, the trainee is ordered to report at a stated date, hour and place, where trainees will be mobilized for the trip to an Army training camp. He is a deserter if he fails to report.

What happens to deserters? If apprehended they are liable to five years' imprisonment, a $10,000 fine, or both. Men who evade service before induction (refusing to register or fill out classification questionnaires) will be subject to prosecution in a United States District Court. After induction they will face court-martial.

Conscientious Objectors

Conscientious objectors will be dealt with less summarily. Non-combatant service, including duty in the medical corps, quartermaster corps and engineer service behind the zone of operations is open to these individuals. Those who refuse to perform these duties may be courtmartialed or placed in some pacific occupation such as farming (under Army supervision), depending on the sincerity of their objections.

When the trainee reports at the designated "assembly point" he will experience his last contact with the civilian supervision of the selection board. An official from his local board will check his papers, appoint a group leader and assistant leaders, issue transportation, meal and lodging tickets and start the group for camp.

But even before this he was subject to military rule. "Induction"—when a man is considered actually in the Army—occurs not when he arrives at the assembly point or at camp, but at the time his notice to report was mailed. The exact time will be entered on your classification record. That is when you cease to be a civilian.

Tomorrow The Post will discuss the financial implications of conscription. What will be the pay for conscripts? What provision has been made for debt moratorium?

Rites to Be Held Here Thursday For D. J. Burke

Funeral services will be held Thursday for David Joseph Burke, 49, of 2207 Franklin street northeast, who was killed in a two-car collision late Sunday night at Chillum and Sargent roads, Prince Georges County.

Services will be held at 8:30 a. m. in the Chambers' Riverside Funeral Home, with mass to follow at 9 in St. Frances de Sales' Church, Twentieth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

A native of Rockland, Mass., Mr. Burke resided in Washington for the past 20 years. During the World War he served in the Navy, and at the time of his death was attached to the Naval Research Laboratory as a radio engineer.

He leaves his wife, Ellen, who was hurt in the accident, and three sons, Maurice C., Robert W., and David J. Burke.

conneced with alien organizations, and said he had no definite plan for removing them from the public pay roll. He hoped that with Mr. Roosevelt's cooperation something could be done.

Dies claimed earlier today that he has "positive evidence" that the German, Italian and Russian governments were flooding the United States with propaganda designed to disrupt national defense and prevent American aid to Britain.

Nazis Woo Businessmen

In that connection he added tonight that the Nazi propaganda has been found to be aimed especially at creating a favorable attitude toward Germany among American businessmen. It follows the theme, he asserted, that Germany is going to win the war and the businessmen might as well get used to doing business with her.

Dies admitted that Luise Rainer, the movie actress, had visited him here today. He declined to discuss the nature of their discussion, however, and said it was of little importance.

He said he would continue hearings in New York's Federal building tomorrow. They must be in secret, he explained, because in view of the present international situation the very appearance before his committee might prove embarrassing to some witnesses.

Bombers Leave Red Fire in Berlin

R. A. F. Pilots Report Fierce Resistance From Antiaircraft

By the United Press

London, Aug. 26.—Well-aimed bombs left a "large red fire" burning in Berlin early today when British planes, running a gauntlet of blazing antiaircraft fire, attacked the German capital's military objectives, the air ministry reported tonight.

In the nearly three-hour-long attack, during which the British bombers flew directly over the heart of Berlin, bombs were dropped on "selected military objectives" on the outskirts of the city, the air ministry said.

Newest Raid Repelled

[A new British raid on Berlin just after midnight Tuesday apparently was turned back west of the city, where antiaircraft fire was heard, Berlin dispatches said. The German capital had a 36-minute alarm, but no bombs were dropped, no planes were heard, and downtown antiaircraft batteries were silent.

[Meanwhile, the boom of neutral Switzerland's antiaircraft guns aimed at foreign planes racing across the Alps indicated new British raids on northern Italy. An hour and a half later, a second series of alarms in Swiss cities apparently signaled the return of the British bombers.]

The attack on Berlin was carried out while other squadrons of Royal Air Force bombers ranged over wide areas of Germany, Holland, Belgium and northern France, attacking airdromes, arms plants and other vital objectives.

The attacks were pressed home under unfavorable weather conditions and heavy haze, it was said. Five British bombers failed to return.

The objectives bombed in Berlin were said to have included antiaircraft batteries and searchlight concentrations around the Nazi capital, great numbers of which went into action against the attackers.

(In Berlin it was stated that incendiary bombs were dropped on two suburbs, setting fire to a small garden nursery in the northern suburb of Rosenthal. One British plane was said to have been shot down near Berlin, and four more were said to have been forced down in the North Sea.)

Antiaircraft Fire Fierce

The air minstry said the British pilots encountered fierce antiaircraft fire from the time they crossed the Nazi-held Channel coast until they reached Berlin—about 600 miles from London.

"We cruised around for a half hour before we located our target and at all times guns were popping off at us, quite accurately, and then suddenly we saw a small gap beginning to open in the clouds 3 or 4 miles away and we made for it," a pilot was quoted as saying.

The pilot said he saw a main road junction through the cloud gap, then the reflection of the moon on a lake.

"These two points gave us our position," he said. "Working down the lakes we got to our target.

"More searchlights than ever started up and we couldn't keep our course to bomb the first time. So we did a preliminary canter, then went away and two or three minutes later we came back.

"We didn't dare go very far away because, having had that bit of luck in finding the place, we were afraid of losing it once more in the clouds.

"We went just far enough to shake off the guns and searchlights, then came right back over the target.

"By this time the friendly gap in the clouds had opened just a bit more.

"Having dropped our bombs we turned back, dodging violently, because the guns were getting warm again."

The air ministry said that bomber pilots familiar with the "England-to-Berlin journey" because of previous pamphlet raids on the German capital had been chosen for the attack early today.

British authorities asserted that the Berlin raid was for purely military purposes.

"We will not resort to terrorization bombing," these authorities said.

The air ministry said British coastal command bomber squadrons attacked oil tanks at Cherbourg and seaplanes and torpedo boats in Boulogne harbor. Docks at Flushing also were said to have been bombed.

"Other aircraft attacked supply depots at Cologne, Hamm and Schwerte, and docks at the great German naval base of Bremen."

The air ministry said that a Sunderland flying boat, which carries a crew of 16, attacked a number of enemy flying boats anchored in the Tromsoe area of Norway. Two of them were reported sunk, a third set afire and others damaged.

Defense Allies Meet Together in Canada

HISTORIC MEETING—Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York (left) led the United States section of the new Canadian-American defense board to Canada yesterday. The six U. S. representatives were welcomed by Prime Minister Mackenzie King (right)

big Pan-American defense scheme and he replied:

"You must use your own judgment on that point, but I think it is self-evident."

He said it would be important to go into matters of detail at the present stage of the conversations when asked if there had been any discussions of the plan to be taken regarding coastal patrol.

O. M. Biggar, chairman of the Canadian section, said that today's meeting of four hours had developed most useful and satisfying discussions.

Technical experts of the thre services attended the sesion.

The board recessed until tomorrow morning. The expectation is that meetings will be held until Wednesday night, when an adjournment will be made to draft specific recommendations for continental defense measures to the governments of the two countries.

Today, conference sources stated, noteworthy progress was made in the launching of the first joint stock-taking of Western Hemisphere defenses ever undertaken cooperatively by the two English-speaking democracies of the Western World. It is to be a stock-taking upon a most elaborate scale that will include not only considerations of broad, general policy, but also the most minute details of fortifications at specific points.

The ultimate avowed object of the board's work was expressed by one of the delegates as being to make North America nothing short of a "continental fortress."

The United States delegation, headed by LaGuardia, as civilian representative, arrived today by train. The other members were Lieut. Gen. Stanley D. Embick, commander of the Fourth Corps Army Area; Capt. Harry W. Hill, of the Navy War Plans Division; Commander Forrest P. Sherman, U. S. Navy; Lieut. Col. Joseph T. McNarney, of the Army Air Corps, and John D. Hickerson, assistant chief of European affairs in the State Department, serving as secretary.

Canada's members are O. M. Biggar, Brig. K. Stuart, deputy chief of the Canadian army general staff; Capt. L. W. Murray, deputy chief of the naval staff; Air Commander A. A. L. Cuffe, and Hugh L. Keenleyside, counselor of the department of external affairs.

Australia Pact Seen

Tokyo (Tuesday), Aug. 27 (U.P.).—The ultra-Nationalist newspaper Kokumin, which usually reflects the views of the war office, said today that "informed quarters" believe the United States plans formation of an Australian-American defense committee similar to the recently organized Canadian-American committee for the study of mutual defense problems.

Senate Limits Use of Drafted Troops to Western Hemisphere

gram were disclosed on the Senate floor.

Chairman Sheppard, of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, revealed the Army program during consideration of an amendment proposed by Senator Lodge to limit the number of men to be drafted under the bill.

Sheppard said the Army proposed to call 400,000 men by January 1, in four increments. Seventy-five thousand men would be inducted into the service, October 15, under the plan, with 115,000 called November 15, 112,000 December 15, and 98,000 late in December, he stated.

Four hundred thousand more would be called April 1, 600,000 on October 1, 1941, and then 400,000 on each April 1 and October 1 annually until April, 1944. Men would be given a year's training under the bill, after which they would pass into the reserve.

By 1944, Sheppard said, the military force of the United States would approximate:

Approximately, 3,400,000 conscripted men, 800,000 of whom would be in active service and 2,600,000 in a trained reserve.

About 375,000 "professional" soldiers in the Regular Army.

And 255,000 in the National Guard.

The Lodge amendment to limit the number of drafted men was finally adopted by voice vote after undergoing several changes on the floor. As approved, it provides that not more than 900,000 draftees may be in active Army service during peace at any one time.

Senator Lodge originally proposed a limit of 800,000, while Administration leaders backed a ceiling of 1,000,000 drafted men in service at any one time. Another change excludes any men drafted for the Navy and Marine Corps from the 900,000 limit.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, leader of the conscription opposition forces, pronounced the restriction "meaningless." He pointed out that it would largely conform to the Army's program for calling out men for service.

Facing the prospect of a night session, the Senate slowed down the flow of oratory and acted on more amendments during the afternoon than during the entire two weeks or more that the bill has been before it.

Another proposal by Senator Lodge that would have restricted the age limit of the draft to men 21 to 25 was voted down, 60 to 19. The Senate version of the bill now would make men 21 to 31 subject to registration and draft, while the House bill would register all males from 18 to 65 and subject those of 21 to 45 to call for military service.

An amendment offered by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, to assure that colored men 18 to 35 years old may have equal opportunity to enlist in the Army, Navy and air forces was approved, 53 to 21.

Civil Trials Voted

Wagner charged the Army has "unfairly discriminated" against Negroes by denying ther entrance into the Air Corps and turning away applicants for the other branches because the four existing colored regiments are at full strength. The Navy accepts colored men only in the mess branches, proponents declared.

On motion of Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, the Senate voted that men charged with draft dodging under the measure be tried by a civil rather than a military court.

The Senate agreed to an amendment proposed by Majority Leader Barkley authorizing unlimited appropriations to carry out the draft. Congress must later vote such funds, however, in separate legislation before any men may be called into service.

Rehiring Plan Approved

Also approved was a proposal to make the provision requiring employers to rehire men at the conclusion of their military service conform to that written into the National Guard mobilization bill now awaiting the President's signature.

Under the change, men denied reemployment must seek relief in the Federal courts rather than with the National Labor Relations Board.

Two other changes proposed by Senator White (Republican), of Maine, were adopted, giving a right of appeal from local draft boards and barring any connection between such civilian boards and the Army.

Labor And Politics

A telegram recently sent out from the offices of Joseph Curran, head of the C. I. O. National Maritime Union and president of the Greater New York Industrial Union Council of the C. I. O., requested various local unions to help finance a peace rally to be held in Chicago this week-end. Instead of sending cash, a large number of union officials sent angry letters to Mr. Curran denouncing the peace mobilization proposal as a "Fifth Column" plot with which they will have nothing to do.

It appears that the solicitation of funds was supposed to be a personal appeal from Mr. Curran, his official title being unwittingly appended to the message sent to the local unions. But there is no denying that he used the prestige of his office to obtain financial support for a movement directed against peacetime conscription. Nor is it denied that the local industrial council headed by Mr. Curran is on record in opposition to compulsory military training. Under the circumstances, Mr. Curran's request for funds carried an official stamp regardless of his intentions.

The revolt precipitated by the offending telegram is significant chiefly as a warning to labor leaders to keep aloof from political issues about which the rank and file hold diverse opinions. Every individual is entitled to express his views freely on the subject of peacetime conscription. It is a question that intimately concerns all Americans. But it certainly cannot be assumed that laboring men as a group oppose the draft and agree with Mr. Curran that the projected Chicago peace rally would help to strengthen our national defenses.

The A. F. of L. grew powerful under the leadership of Samuel Gompers because he stressed the importance of working for definite economic objectives and avoiding entangling party affiliations. The organized labor movement in this country is still without a party stamp. Unlike European labor organizations, it has never been committed to acceptance of a comprehensive political program. As a result both major parties bid for the favors of labor—a reward of nonpartisanship.

Recently, John L. Lewis announced in one of his gloomier moments that "some day the people of this country are going to lose confidence in the existing political parties to such a degree that they are going to form their own party." Presumably he was thinking of a Labor Party. But the time for such a change has not arrived, and the growing disaffection among the followers of the politically minded Mr. Lewis strongly suggests that it may never come.

The furor created by the Curran telegram should be a reminder to C. I. O. leaders, from Mr. Lewis down, not to use the prestige of office to impose their political views upon their union following.

Saving Time

One of the arguments which has been advanced in favor of the move to postpone conscription until next year is that at the present time adequate housing is lacking for any large addition to the present military establishment.

The argument is a specious one, on a par with the contention that men should not be called to the colors until the Army is in a position to provide the new recruits with full equipment. Had Congress hastened action on the Burke-Wadsworth bill, a housing program for those summoned under a selective service system would by now be under way.

At any rate, President Roosevelt has properly cut the ground from under this argument by authorizing the appropriation of a sum, said to approximate $25,000,000, for the construction of water drainage and utility services preparatory to erection of cantonments for 400,000 men. The funds will come out of the $200,000,000 placed under the Chief Executive's personal control in the first special appropriation for the Army and Navy voted by Congress at this session.

There is no question as to the legal right of the President to allocate funds for this purpose. Nor can there be any doubt that he was wise in doing so. In matters of defense time is of the essence. In permitting the preliminary measures to be taken to make possible a speedier construction of necessary cantonments Mr. Roosevelt will help cut down the time between the registration of men and the commencement of actual training.

The Real Bottleneck

There is a growing impression in and out of Washington that the United States' preparedness program is bogging down. Several Senators have indicated their dissatisfaction with the progress that is being made. An attitude of impatience because of repeated delays is evident in the press and in numerous public speeches as well as in official comment.

In issuing his critical statement Senator Vandenberg made an excellent point. "It is time for candor," he said, "and for real action." To make certain that action will be effective it must be preceded by a frank examination of the factors that are causing delay. But neither Senator Vandenberg nor Senator Byrd, who previously called for an investigation of rearmament delays, seems to understand the chief cause of the situation against which they protest.

The first step toward speeding up the program is to obtain a clear view of what the Defense Commission, the Army and Navy have already done and are now doing. Senator Byrd's statement that only 343 fighting airplanes have been ordered in the last 100 days suggests that he is concentrating on minor facts that have no particular significance. Actually our aircraft industry is running at full capacity. The Defense Commission estimates that American factories will be turning out airplanes at the rate of 18,000 a year by next January and that the rate will be stepped up to 36,000 by the end of 1941.

Plants are now in the process of manufacturing 2,029 combat and observation planes ordered by the Army, in addition to 1,862 training craft. Navy orders in the process of being filled call for 1,221 bombers, pursuit and observation planes as well as 1,573 training planes. So it should not be assumed that airplane manufacturers are idly waiting for Government orders.

Emphasis is being placed on training craft at the beginning of the program because of the urgent necessity of training pilots to operate the combat planes when they become available.

Virtually everyone would like to see more airplanes under production. But new factories will have to be built before the output can be greatly increased. And the building of new factories, in some instances, awaits action by Congress permitting private companies to proceed without risking bankruptcy.

Fortunately, some airplane factories are now being constructed under the Defense Commission's plan of dividing risks between the Government and industry. But specific amortization allowances are nonetheless urgently needed to permit the program to go full-steam ahead. No less important is repeal of the Vinson-Trammell Act which now makes it extremely difficult for small subcontractors to participate in the naval or aircraft segments of the defense program.

Some delay has been encountered in the signing of new contracts. That is not surprising, however, in view of the fact that Congress has twice changed the limitation on defense industry profits since the latter part of June. Many contracts have had to be rewritten. So far as large-scale production of aircraft is concerned, moreover, most of the funds for purchase of planes are contained in the $5,000,000,000 appropriations bill still awaiting action by the Senate.

By all means Congress should demand a faster tempo in our preparations for defense. Objective analyses show, however, that the real bottleneck is Congress itself. Substantial progress is being made by the Defense Commission, in spite of legislative handicaps. And the President has greatly strengthened our strategic position through negotiations with Canada, Great Britain and the Latin-American republics. Congress, on the other hand, is still dawdling.

Before Congress begins to look for any inefficiency or delay in the Army, Navy or Defense Commission, it should attend to four urgent tasks of its own. These are enactment of the Burke-Wadsworth bill, the $5,000,000,000 appropriation bill for essential equipment and the five-year amortization proposal, and repeal of the Vinson-Trammell Act.

There would not be much point in probing into the efficiency of a defense system which has its hands tied behind its back. The first necessity is to give it a chance to operate effectively. Then the administrative machinery can be improved in the light of experience.

Seeing Is Believing

The invitation which Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, has extended to the chiefs of staff of the other American republics to visit the principal military installations of the United States next October is a move very much in the right direction.

Much has been done during recent months to translate the ideal of hemisphere defense into a practical reality. But the task is obviously still far from being completed. There is special need of supplementing the work now being undertaken by the Canadian-American Joint Board on Defense with similar conversations between our Army and Navy heads and those of the nations to our south.

That need is particularly urgent because the high commands of some Latin-American military establishments are composed of men who have been trained in German and Italian staff schools or trained by German and Italian military missions. Some of these men have become great admirers of the totalitarian system. And agents of Hitler and Mussolini have seen to it that they have been kept fully informed regarding the military prowess of the Berlin-Rome Axis and the alleged helplessness of the United States.

The tour of American military bases, with, be it hoped, side tours of our great industrial areas, should help offset the notion that the United States can never be a match for the totalitarian powers. It should convince the visitors that this country is determined to implement the Monroe Doctrine at all costs. No doubt the occasion will also be used to pave the way for a closer coordination of inter-American defense efforts. The need of such conversations requires no demonstration at this time.

A Year Of War

In its August Survey appearing yesterday the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York broadly reviews the effect of the European war upon American business. Although the war has been in progress for a year, the Survey is by no means sure whether it has assisted or retarded business activity on this side of the Atlantic. "On the whole," it concludes, the influence of the war "has probably been stimulating rather than otherwise."

Evidence to support this tentative conclusion is not entirely convincing. Although there has been a moderate improvement in domestic business compared with a year ago, the upturn antedates the outbreak of the war. Certain so-called war industries have undoubtedly been greatly stimulated by export buying for belligerent account. But against these gains must be debited the foreign trade losses of other producers, directly attributable to the war.

Following an initial speculative rise, commodity prices have also failed to respond to the expected inflationary stimulus of war-time demands. On the contrary, the cutting off of export outlets for some of our important agricultural products has had a depressing effect upon the general price level.

The prevalent uncertainty concerning the business outlook has likewise been reflected in the dormant state of the stock market. During July stock sales fell to the lowest figure recorded since August, 1918.

The depressing effect of the recent German conquests has not as yet been fully reflected in domestic trade and industrial statistics. On the other hand the stimulating influence of our own defense program is only beginning to be apparent. The spectacular rise in steel activity in recent months owes little to the domestic armaments program. When this program really gets under way its stimulative effect will doubtless greatly overshadow that of the war in Europe. However, the Guaranty Survey gloomily points out that the defense program also "involves a prospect of greatly increased taxation and a mounting load of debt."

Any conclusions concerning the effect of the war upon American business are, of course, subject to reservations concerning the length of the war, its outcome and the nature of the peace terms. Whatever happens, it is certain that the close of the war will find the United States facing difficult and painful adjustments of its industrial organization. For to the extent that war and domestic defense preparations provide the basis for business expansion along certain lines, the sudden removal of these extraordinary stimuli will give rise to serious problems calling for some sort of remedial action.

Exit The Commissars

From the St. Louis Times-Star

The Soviet army publication, Red Star, celebrates abolition of the system of political commissars in the military forces by declaring that these politicos have "fulfilled their roles" and now are no longer necessary. It pays them the tribute of saying that without them there "couldn't have been a Red army," properly indoctrinated along Communist lines, but it adds that the "requirements of modern warfare obviated their most important role."

Perhaps the meaning of this ironic phrase, the "requirements of modern warfare," is to be found in the difficulties of the Soviet forces last winter in Finland. From the grewsome Finnish battlefields came strange rumors of political commissars interfering with the Soviet commanders, trying to whip up lagging enthusiasm among the troops and watching over the army officers. The results, at first, were not brilliant.

If Soviet military men are like their kin all over the world, they have a profound dislike for politicians who meddle in actual field operations. Stalin may have learned that he will get a more efficient defense system if he throws the commissars out and gives the professionals, whose business is fighting a chance to construct an army. The triumphs of Hitler in the west suggest that eventually he will need it.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

"The Democratic Way"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "All prospect that President Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie will follow in the tradition of Lincoln and Douglas appears to have been shattered."

The foregoing is quoted from an editorial in The Post of August 22 and was apparently not well considered, in that it gives a false impression to the reader who hurriedly takes in a few lines to get the gist of the "Democratic Way." To those in great numbers who are not conversant with the "tradition" here sought to be set up an erroneous impression is established.

Lincoln and Douglas were candidates in a State campaign; neither being the President or even a candidate for the Presidency. Tradition such as that has been established in many State and district campaigns, but all this is a far cry from being a tradition wherein a President in office goes gallivanting over the United States in a partisan contest with another candidate whose challenge, if sincere, indicates a degree of effrontery seldom surpassed, if indeed equaled.

There might have been a shadow of excuse in time long past for a President in office to go on the hustings in joint debate, but with the press and radio of today providing every means for disseminating ideas and information, and especially at this critical time, the insistent challenge of Mr. Willkie becomes ridiculous. E. M. PETERSON.

Youth And Dictatorship

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the youth is the hope of the world, as we are often led to believe by youth himself, then is the outlook dark indeed. Let's take a look at the record.

Who was responsible for Mussolini's rise to unchecked power? The youth of Italy. Who elevated Stalin to a dictatorship far more oppressive than any of the czars? The youth of Russia. Who helped Hitler in his rise to the tyrant's throne? Who fanatically backed him in every move toward the enslavement of free peoples and his ruthless destruction of European culture? Who, indeed, but the youth of Germany?

And now, with Hitler's bloody hands reaching across the Channel to strangle the last democracy in Europe, who loudly proclaims, "We won't fight, or prepare to fight, until we are actually attacked?" The youth of the United States of America. Who doesn't parade with placards bearing the inscription, "I am willing to fight for my country because it is worth fighting for?" Youth. And so, ladies and gentlemen, I give you—Youth! And may you keep him. C. R. G.

Forgotten Measure

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the days when the Ludlow amendment was the rage it was the style to talk about letting the people have something to say about the United States entering the war. Despite serious shortcomings, the proposed amendment did consider the all-important matter of consulting the people.

Today our country is tottering on the brink of belligerency. Amidst all of the moves pulling us down the road to armed intervention, where, oh where, are the vociferous advocates of the Ludlow amendment who were going to let the people have something to say about these matters? A WORRIED CITIZEN.
Washington, Aug. 20.

Delaying Defense

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It appears that the airplane manufacturers are not as fearful that Hitler will attack us soon as some of our Senators seem to be. According to figures given out only 33 of 4,000 warplanes for which Congress provided funds in June have been contracted for. A $10,000,000 order for 5-inch naval guns is still waiting for someone to accept. It seems that the War Department is laying the blame on Congress because they are attempting to restrict profits.

Now, isn't that an example of patriotism on the part of big business? How about the boys some of our leaders want to see forced into the Army? Why shouldn't these boys refuse to do their part till Congress promises them that they shall suffer no loss? Who is going to compensate them for the loss, perchance, of limb, or hand, of sight, of hearing or possibly of life itself? Will the War Department plead their cause?

If those who could manufacture the materiel can measure their patriotism by profits, why should not the boys likewise who are expected to do the handling of this materiel? "What is sauce for the goose should be sauce for the gander." CONSISTENCY.
Washington, Aug. 15.

Southern Democrats

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every day in every way Wendell Willkie looks better to Texas Democrats. However it may be in other States, in Texas he certainly is, as he said, "in front of a trend."

Don't be surprised if he carries the Lone Star State November 5, nor if he runs first in Florida, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Kentucky and Virginia.

The South has stood by Mr. Roosevelt during the two terms which are all that any President should ask of the American people.

The South is fundamentally and for sound reasons Democratic. It recognizes in Mr. Willkie a better Democrat and an abler man for the Presidency than Mr. Roosevelt. The South's State and local governments will long remain Democratic, with a gradual infiltration of Republican officials chosen for superior fitness as individuals.

We have no more desire than the North, the East, and the West to see the Presidency become the permanent property of any one man. FRANK PUTNAM.
Houston, Tex., Aug. 13.

District Suffrage

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the midst of all this discussion on national defense, conscription, etc., it is indeed ironical that six Southern Congressmen managed to bury the Sumners resolution which would, if passed, make the District of Columbia a part of this great democracy instead of a political football to be tossed around at the will of a few self-seeking politicians on the Hill.

Every day we hear political orators talking about the "great democracy of ours," or Britain's great "crusade for democracy." A great blow would be struck for democracy by granting suffrage and self-government to these 663,000 good American citizens. WASHINGTONIAN.
Washington, Aug. 23.

Latin-American Defense

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As to the sending of 50 destroyers of the obsolete type to Great Britain or Canada, I believe it would be in keeping with our National Defense Program not only to allow Canada the use of these old destroyers but our Latin American neighbors as well.

Our friends in South America would depend on us in case of an emergency. Be it invasion, revolution or Fifth Column menace, the United States would be requested to maintain international peace in the Western Hemisphere to aid the Latin American countries as well as Canada.

If the United States were to better trade conditions with equal advantage to the countries of South America it would not only speed up our National Defense Program, but would give this New World a peace and security from invasion which has never been possible in the Old World. Not only should the United States promote trade relations with these countries but should allow them credit to build up their own defenses.

By allowing the Latin American countries to buy our obsolete destroyers, old equipment and ammunition we would not only lessen the possibility of invasion but also avoid sending an army into many of these countries.

Air bases along and near the entrances to the Panama Canal are far more important to the United States than any we might acquire from Canada. Canada should be able to defend herself at St. Johns and Newfoundland without the help of the United States. HERMAN J. LICHTY.
Washington, Aug. 22.

"Conscripting Dollars"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Does not your editorial on "Conscripting Dollars" lose sight of a principal objective of the Lee measure—namely to secure for the Government in wartime the "slacker" dollar, which always hunts the highest margin of profit and lets the patriotic dollar volunteer for war service?

I think our lawmakers are sufficiently resourceful to safeguard the measure against requiring liquidation of investments in essential productive industry for investment in war bonds.

The excess profits tax will catch much of the "slacker" money, but for every tax dodger who is caught scores of hundreds "get away with it," and to deal with slackers of this sort ante rather than post facto would seem to me to be highly desirable.

Doubtless the constitutional point against the Lee amendment was good. The measure should have originated in the House. However, I think its objective sound and that some such measure is needed if the Nation's money as well as manpower is to do its proper part in defense or in winning a war. EDWARD FERRIS.
Washington, Aug. 23.

Shakespeare's View

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think the lines from one of Shakespeare's plays, quoted below, are appropriate to the debate now taking place both in and out of Congress, viz:

The wound of peace is surety,
Surety secure: but modest doubt is called

The Post Impressionist

Great Uncle Pomp

I REMEMBER my Great-Uncle Pomp vaguely as a tall, thin old man with sandy hair and a scraggly drooping mustache. He was born with that unfortunate trait which crops out from time to time in our family—an overwhelming, all-embracing antipathy for work. It was agonizing to him, body and soul, to have to perform any sort of labor. It is not surprising, therefore, that he "never did a lick in his life"; nor did he ever marry, preferring to remain a bachelor, I suppose, rather than risk the necessity of going to work to support a woman.

Uncle Pomp, however, led no Utopian existence. He lived with his two married sisters, whose combined incomes was well able to take care of him and two husbands.

But there never were ladies with kinder hearts and sharper tongues. Their brother was allowed to have no illusions about himself. In their verbal opinion he was a "no-count, a wastrel, and a ne'er-do-well," and it was a much-benagged existence he led. He would listen and retort for just so long, then with rather powerful language would stomp out of the house muttering between other comments—"they'll hound a man to death."

He had a violent temper when aroused and could string out some fantastic but satisfying oaths. I remember once repeating some of his phrases in the presence of my aunts. Both ladies were quite horrified and immediately recognized the source.

Strangely enough Uncle Pomp seemed to take a sort of pleasure in annoying his worthy sisters, and I believe they enjoyed berating him in the peculiar sense the Irish have of liking to wrangle. They would begin in a tantalizing vein, but before it was over they would all be angry.

Uncle Pomp would sometimes disappear for days, on a spree no doubt, in the nearby town. Once on an election night he came home with a black eye after having fought a Republican to a draw. "Two old roosters and neither one game enough to whip the other" was my Aunt Jen's only comment.

There was a horse on the place that once came near driving the old man into apoplexy. This horse, Old Bob, by name, possessed a nature very like Uncle Pomp's in his ability to exasperate. Also he was the laziest horse in the State of South Carolina. One summer my aunts had as a guest an accomplished but very absent-minded musician. Mr. G. was a strange fellow, always silent and preoccupied, only coming out of his shell when he sat down at the piano.

My aunts, being real music lovers, did not mind his queerness as long as he gave them a nightly concert. One day, needing supplies from Greenville, the town about 3 miles distant, they sent Mr. G. over by buggy to purchase a list of products. I remember that two lists were made out—one put in the musician's hand and the other in his pocket to insure delivery. Old Bob was hitched up to make the trip.

On this particular day, Uncle Pomp, who had been spending some time in Greenville, decided to walk home again. He was delighted on taking the road that hot afternoon to see the familiar buggy not far ahead of him. The musician sat with the reins held limply, his eyes fixed on Bob in dreamy meditation. The contrary old horse, mildly surprised at such an amiable driver, took his own good time, nibbling grass here and there along the way.

Uncle Pomp hastened up the road calling for Mr. G. to wait for him. His words, however, fell on deaf ears. The musician was lost in the realms of some other world. Uncle Pomp then appealed to the horse. "Whoa, Bob; whoa, sir!" he bellowed. Bob, hearing a well-known voice, pretended deafness. This was typical of him. No sooner did he suspect the will of his pursuer than he determined to do all in his power to thwart that will no matter what the cost to himself.

Uncle Pomp by this time was loping along behind the buggy, sweating, panting, and yelling in high angry tones at Mr. G. to "pull up, Goddamn you!"

Once or twice the horse sensed that he was dropping so far behind that he might abandon the chase. Then he would lapse into a decrepit walk until Uncle Pomp came within 10 feet or so. Then, with heartbreaking deceit, he would jerk the buggy forward at a smart pace, switching his tail with a flourish. When this happened for the third time Uncle Pomp lost all the little patience he might have possessed. He staggered through the dust of the road, loudly and bitterly cursing Mr. G., Old Bob and life in general. So it was that he came into the village, red faced, dust covered, and shocking the ladies with his terrific language. My aunts, of course, were mortified, at his scandalizing the neighbors, but Uncle Pomp never repented. Nor would he forgive the musician, whom he was convinced had purposely switched Bob into action every time he approached the buggy. As for Mr. G., I doubt if he ever knew anything of the incident.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Mr. Willkie's Campaign

ALTHOUGH a number of democratic Senators—chiefly Mr. Wheeler, of Montana; Mr. Clark, of Missouri, and Mr. Walsh, of Massachusetts—are the advertised leaders of the opposition to conscription and to helping Great Britain, they draw their practical influence from the Republican Party organization in Congress. There are no signs as yet that Mr. McNary, the leader of the Republicans in the Senate and also Mr. Willkie's running mate, or that Mr. Martin, the leader of the Republicans in the House and also Mr. Willkie's campaign manager, are prepared to carry out the pledges of Mr. Willkie's acceptance speech. Both Mr. McNary and Mr. Martin have, as regards foreign policy and national defense, consistently opposed the spirit and the letter of the Elwood speech, and on the record votes they have aligned most of the Republican Party in the opposition.

It is from this Republican opposition that the small minority of Democratic objectors derive their effectiveness in delaying and obstructing the measures which both Mr. Willkie and Mr. Roosevelt have asked for. It is from the Republicans that the Congressional opposition obtain most of the votes. But what is even more important, the fact that the official Republican organization in Congress takes an isolationist and more or less pacifist line, enables a minority of Democrats to frighten the Democratic majority with the continual threat of a party schism. Because the Republicans under Messrs. McNary and Martin do not support the national policy as formulated by the leaders of both parties, a relatively small group of insurgent Democrats are able to control the balance of power in Congress and thus to exercise an influence out of all proportion to their real strength. Their influence would decline and their power of obstruction would dissolve the moment Mr. Willkie was able to induce his running mate and his campaign manager to follow his leadership.

AND SO, until Mr. Willkie brings his own party to the support of his own pledges, he is plainly in no position to challenge the President on any issue or to criticize the efficiency of what is now being done for national defense. The first condition of leadership is to be able to lead one's own followers. We live under a system of party government, and before a Presidential candidate can challenge the other party he must have established himself as the leader of his own party.

For if he is unable to lead his own party and has quarreled with the other one as well, just how he is going to translate into reality all his excellent personal pledges, hopes, and ideals? A President without a party is, as we know from the sad histories of President Taft and President Hoover, hopelessly and helplessly stalled.

Nothing is to be gained, certainly not by those of us who hope to be able to support him, in concealing the fact that although Mr. Willkie was nominated as the result of a popular rebellion against the Republican Party machine, two months have passed without his becoming the actual leader of his party, for leadership does not consist in making speeches and giving out interviews. It consists in inducing other men to act. And there is as yet no indication that the Republican Party leaders in Congress have paid the slightest attention to Mr. Willkie's views on any great issue. The Republicans who are supporting conscription and help to Britain were supporting these measures before Mr. Willkie was nominated; the rest, and they include the official Republican leaders in Congress, either remain in opposition or are passively, like Messrs. McNary and Martin, not giving their support.

IN THE FACT that Mr. Willkie has let the summer go by without establishing his leadership of the Republican Party, there is to be found, I believe, the real explanation for his failure to gain ground since his personal triumph at Philadelphia. The latest Gallup Poll confirms what most experienced observers had already noted, namely the momentum of the popular movement behind Willkie has become bogged down, and that if he has not actually lost votes, he has not been gaining them. Gallup polls are not infallible, of course, and they do not measure the intensity of the support behind a candidate. But it is surely the fact that since June the enthusiasm for Willkie has been noticeably chilled as week after week, in the midst of the most critical period of modern history, Mr. Willkie remained remote from the scene of action, reserved on the great controversial issues, and personally isolated from the critical decisions which are shaping the destiny of the country. Crusades cannot be led by any one reclining in an easy chair on the veranda of a summer hotel, and popular movements cannot be put in cold storage for two months and then be set moving again. It is especially difficult to do that when the leader of the crusade is running against a President who day after day is actually dealing with the real issues of the proposed crusade.

There is no use pretending, it seems to me, that the first two months of the Willkie campaign have not been worse than wasted owing to a fundamental misconception of the political situation. Mr. Willkie was nominated by a popular movement which overwhelmed the existing Republican Party organization. The vitality of the movement required that Mr. Willkie should at once translate his personal victory into effective leadership of his party. This required immediate action—with no time out in which the defeated party machine could recover and reestablish itself. The action required was to make the party leaders in Congress, especially Mr. McNary and Mr. Martin, bring the party organization into line. This action would have been an immediate and decisive intervention by Mr. Willkie in the real events of the day. He would have been from the start of the campaign a principal participating as a statesman in events. But instead of recognizing his responsibility as the Republican leader and fulfilling it, which would have made him at once a great figure, he became bemused with the idea that he did not need to act and that he could win by talking. He forgot that he had not yet shown his prowess as a party leader and he founded his campaign on the notion that he could outbox the champ.

BUT THIS is a radical miscalculation. For as long as Mr. Willkie is conducting a merely personal campaign, without loyal and wholehearted support from his party, he has no way of convincing the country that he can accomplish any of the things he says he means to do. His claim to be elected, and it is at bottom a substantial claim, is that he can do better the things that Mr. Roosevelt is doing. But that claim cannot be demonstrated by smart speeches and it will be ruined entirely if the people come to feel that Mr. Willkie thinks he can run the country before he has shown that he can run his party.

For this is not a talking contest and words have no credit unless they are issued against a reserve of acts. Mr. Willkie has not yet done anything. So Mr. Willkie's campaign has not been flourishing. For it has been based, thus far, upon an avoidance of those acts of party leadership which the practical situation requires. Until these acts have been performed, all the rest of the campaign will seem unreal because it is unreal, being, in fact, so much personal rhetoric and private oratory.

Madden's Term Ends as Inquiry On NLRB Is Called

As the term of J. Warren Madden, as chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, expired last night, a meeting of the Smith Committee to Investigate the NLRB was called for this afternoon to consider, it is understood, the reopening of hearings on the Division of Economic Research. The division has been continued by the Labor Board under another name despite the recommendation of a House appropriations subcommittee that it be abolished.

Furthermore, some members of the appropriations committee are also scheduled to meet today, presumably to discuss the possibility of accompanying the next grant of funds to the board with specific legislative restrictions. (Two weeks ago the board applied for a deficiency appropriation of $150,000 for printing and binding.)

Meanwhile, the Senate Labor Committee will continue its executive sessions today on proposed amendments to the National Labor Relations Act.

Benefits Of Repeal

MARSHAL PETAIN'S government of France is making a bad mistake in attempting to impose a modified form of prohibition.

We tried prohibition here, and we can tell the marshal that things are much better since we learned our lesson and abandoned an experiment which, however noble in purpose, simply did not work. Since repeal our cities have blossomed with beautiful saloon signs which delight the eye, our bars are without question among the loveliest features of the American scene, and the drunkest man or woman is the most patriotic.

It has been noticed that unemployment has practically disappeared since the American people sensibly decided to drink their way out of the slough. Thousands of men and women are employed making saloon signs and keeping them repaired and providing the electricity to run them. The production of bar furniture, with its gleaming metal and red imitation leather has given jobs to countless worthy citizens, and the manufacture of jook boxes and the service thereof have been a boon to cabinet makers, electricians and musicians. These are only a comparative few of the vast number who would still be unemployed if the liquor traffic were not.

IT HAS BEEN so long since the American farmer was relieved of all his woes and raised to a position of economic security by the demand for grains for liquor and beer that we sometimes forget that back before repeal he was one of the worst problems of the Nation. The woodsmen who cut the hard wood, the coopers who make the barrels, the printers who produce the beautiful labels, the glassworkers who turn out the bottles, the distillery workers and packers and shippers, the salesmen, bartenders, waiters and bussboys and the singers who pass among the tables bursting with witty song about adultery all owe their employment to the repeal of prohibition.

Marshal Petain could have learned that the taxes received from the liquor traffic have practically abolished the debt of the country as every sane person promised they would. And on the spiritual or patriotic side he might be surprised to hear there has been a great profit in the loyal effort of every citizen to drink as much as he or she can buy or consume so as to provide employment and revenue. If a citizen knows that he is serving his country by drinking hard liquor he approaches the bar in a noble spirit, and Americans no longer look down on the souse as a degraded person. On the contrary, he is honored for a conspicuous personal contribution to the national well-being.

A FEW PUBLICATIONS have taken it on themselves to refuse to handle liquor advertisements, but it may interest Marshal Petain to know that American public opinion does not praise them for this. On the contrary, it is thought that they are refusing to cooperate in a patriotic work and sabotage recovery and are placed in the Fifth Column, along with the Communists and those who oppose, or favor, conscription. It is as though the same publications should refuse to give publicity to a Government bond issue or any other project for raising of necessary revenue, and sanctimonious statements of principle do not deceive the honest and loyal American. We know what the dirty curs are up to.

It is pathetic that the old marshal, in his great trial, should make this false move, which not only condemns a fine industry, but renounces without a fair trial a means by which France, like the United States, might be saved. The truth is, of course, as everyone knows, that the French never gave liquor a chance. It often used to be said that one rarely saw a drunken Frenchman, and that, if you don't mind, was the secret of the failure. They were too stingy and too mindful of their personal comfort to spend for liquor and put up with hangovers that Americans gladly endure as a patriotic sacrifice.

The French were just too selfish. But look at the Americans. The greatest hard liquor drinkers on earth, rich, strong, plastered and roaring and offer to lick any so-and-so in the world.

Problems In Congress

By Mark Sullivan

CONGRESS is likely to act on the conscription bill within a reasonably short time. With President Roosevelt having indorsed it strongly last week, and with Republican Candidate Willkie also indorsing it in principle, it seems likely conscription will be adopted in one form or another. On the part of many in both Houses, there will be reluctance and misgiving. Some will vote for it who would not have done so but for the double indorsement from the two party heads. The number is large in both Houses who either do not like conscription as a matter of personal conviction, or are convinced that it will not be popular in the country.

There is one other matter related to war. The tax on business profits is not so urgent as the conscription bill. The profits presumed to arise out of contracts for national defense have hardly begun to accrue; not many contracts have been made yet. The actual payment of such taxes will not begin until March 15 next. Moreover, the writing of such a tax measure is technical and controversial. It is possible Congress may prefer to let the tax measure wait.

MANY IN CONGRESS are eager to go home. Every member of the House is up for reelection (except such as were defeated in party primaries or are voluntarily retiring). Approximately a third of the Senate seats are involved in this campaign. With the election coming on November 5, the time is already short for members to canvass their constituencies. A Congressman up for reelection regards himself as at a disadvantage if he must remain at Washington while an opponent is active in his district. The House especially would be difficult to hold in session beyond the middle of September, unless there were circumstances making their presence imperative. If the continuance of Congress here were made necessary by circumstances arising out of the war, that would be understood by constituents, and the absence of members from their States and districts would be overlooked.

If Congress goes home in early mid-September, the period of recess would probably be for some eight or nine weeks, until just after the election. And always, of course, the President can summon Congress here if need arises. It is well understood, however, that Mr. Roosevelt has no great longing to have Congress here. His original inclination, as expressed at press conferences and elsewhere, was that there was no need for Congress to remain here this summer at all, beyond what would have been the normal time of adjournment, soon after mid-June. The action of Congress in merely recessing for the week of the Republican Convention, and again for the week of the Democratic Convention, reflected the feeling of Congress that it ought to be here, rather than Mr. Roosevelt's wish to have it here. That the judgment of Congress was better, is suggested by the matters which arose for Congress to act upon, including the conscription measure and various new appropriations for defense.

THERE ARE PENDING in Congress two measures of equal importance with those having to do with war. In both cases, these measures have been passed by the House, by majorities more than 2 to 1. In both cases, the measures await action by the Senate. Neither measure is likely to be acted upon if Congress goes home in early or mid-September.

One is the Walter-Logan bill, for limiting the power of Government officials, commissions and regulatory bodies to issue orders affecting citizens; and to preserve for citizens the traditional right of appeal from such orders and regulations to a judicial body.

The other is the group of amendments to the National Labor Relations Act, designed in part to express more clearly the intention of Congress in writing the act and thus to restrict the latitude which is exercised, rather loosely and arbitrarily as most of Congress thinks, by the Labor Board.

THESE ARE MEASURES, not to reverse the New Deal but to restrain it—the Walter-Logan bill has been described as a measure to "regulate the regulators." That these measures have merit is suggested by the fact that they were supported in the House by more than two-thirds of the members, and by more than half the Democrats. The same fact is evidence that the measures are popular, or would be when understood. Members of Congress voting during the spring when they were up for renomination by their parties, and within six months of the time when they will be up for reelection, would not be likely to go counter to popular sentiment.

Failure of the Senate to act on either measure does not mean that the Senate feels differently from the House about the merits of the measure. If the bills came to a vote, probably the Senate would uphold them by majorities comparable to those in the House. The number of thoroughgoing New Dealers in the Senate such as would resist these measures outrightly, is small. But the Senate is a body in which a comparatively small group can bring about inertia.

Books And Things

By William Soskin

Unrequited Love

UNREQUITED love and frustrated devotion have always been popular subjects of fiction, whether the heroine "pined away" in accepted Victorian fashion or carried on bravely and gracefully in the more modern mode. But the unrequited love of Isabel Paterson's new novel, "If It Prove Fair Weather" (Putnam, $2.50), is something else again; for though Emily Cruger's passion in this story is still-born, and her love never consummated, Emily is not one to pine away. Instead, by the manipulation of Mrs. Paterson's plot and the thrusts of her fine Italian hand, it is the highly moral and quite stuffy lover who is sunk by the romance. And Emily, though she emerges in the end realizing that she will love this barren creature forever, is somehow too bright and too sharp a witch to be pitied.

Or am I reacting with crude masculinity to the situation?

Mrs. Paterson has called her book "the only love story ever written" and she has indicated that its purpose is to get away from romanticized emotion and moral and social "explanations" of a love affair, and to present instead the essential nature of the attraction between two people, and the traits of character that cause the difficulties in the relationship. She views this phenomenon of love as a thing in itself, which has reality and power regardless of the social or romantic circumstances that surround it. "It is therefore," she says, "the most fatal and complex of passions."

That is why it is a little more ironic than anything Mrs. Paterson probably intended, that her novel will be relished more for its sharply drawn picture of the brittle life of New York's career women and lady intellectuals, more for its sparkling comment and its telling thrusts at familiar urban figures, than for its presentation of the love affair. The man, James Nathaniel Wishart, is simply too large and too easy a target for all the fun she pokes at modern lovers to mean very much.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Close Of Summer

The summer season is closing, and the great American public has only a few weeks more in which to:

1. Get its discomforts away from home.

2. Sleep on a mattress stuffed with anthracite coal in a bed that is a souvenir of the metal industry at its worst.

3. Become accustomed to mosquitoes in the bedrooms, crickets in the closets, hornets in the sun porch, ants in the table linen and spiders all over the premises.

4. Drive from 100 to 500 miles in an overloaded flivver with poor brakes, no sun-shield, one defective headlight and a constant aroma of something burning.

5. Spend days at a time in heated arguments over what the road signs mean.

6. Tour through endless miles of hotdog, gasoline, tourist camp and souvenir doggie-and-doll zones in the insane belief that it all comes under the head of enjoying scenery.

7. Waste hours in country barns displaying "Antiques" signs so the little woman can look at spinning wheels she doesn't want, ox yokes she can't possibly use and early American shaving mugs that don't mean a thing to her.

8. Learn what America's rural doctors are prescribing for bellyache this summer.

9. Spend two or three terrible nights in those piano boxes known as tourist camp cottages.

10. Determine how much the human system can endure in the matter of steamed clams, fried clams, clam fritters and clam chowder, not to mention lobsters, crabs, cucumber salads and the strange fish native to stranger communities.

11. Pursue the search for a hotel, lunchroom, drug store or drink fountain that doesn't cut its orange juice down to a point where it might more properly be labeled "Hydrant Juice."

12. Sample some of the world's worst coffee.

13. Find out where the worst chefs go in summer.

14. Make the annual discovery that there is no sense in trying to get any salt from a salt cellar at a shore resort.

15. Discover that a change in courses makes no difference in your golf game.

16. Find out that 97 per cent of the instantaneous hot-water systems in the rural districts are out of order.

17. Observe once again that not one cook in a thousand can fry an egg without burning the bottom until the whole thing tastes like something cut from a hot brake band.

18. Experience incredible difficulty getting a room that is not located directly over the hotel garage, a new Federal project involving steam shovels on a night shift, or one flight over the ballroom where the worst orchestra in North America has been engaged for the summer season.

The Militia of Yesterday

The militia took a shore line train early Monday morning, all set for a lark and ready for anything but hard work and intensive military training . . . Some of the boys even wore silk socks and button shoes . . . Liquor was barred, but everybody knew that the company had sent a truckful of stuff on ahead . . . There were usually some rumors that the militiamen would leave camp for a whole day's march, but nobody believed the colonel would be that cruel.

The run to Niantic took about an hour, and immediately upon detraining all hands make for the grill room in the Niantic Hotel, hard by the railroad tracks . . . There was time for a snifter before the order to fall in and march to the camp ground behind Maj. Col. Geddes, Maj. Tilson and other notables on the best horses the livery stables could provide . . . Al Blakeslee always had a job as an orderly and rode a horse, too. . . . It made us pretty jealous.

Mr. Goldwyn Should Come Here to See 'Boom Town'

Lengthy Film Should Delight Palace Fans, But Will Make Double-Feature Patrons Squirm; This, That and the Other About the Theater

By Richard L. Coe

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

WHEN SAMUEL GOLDWYN discussed—cursed is a better word—the double feature problem over CBS Saturday evening on the People's Platform it was a matter only of academic interest for our town.

Picturesquely put, as are all Mr. Goldwyn's words of wisdom, the producer's argument described how he and his wife were traveling in Arizona a few weeks ago. They were particularly anxious to see one film. There it was right across the street from their hotel. So the man who's made scores of hits paid his money and got his choice of a two-hour prelude to his "big picture." There were shorts, newsreels, advertisements and a "B" feature. Along about 10 o'clock Mr. Goldwyn felt the sandman coming along and trundled off to bed, still without a view of the colossus he had come to see.

Of course, as has been stated often before in this space, that's no worry for our town. We take our pictures singly and like it. The Palace's incoming "Boom Town" is a timely example of what to see in the District but to be wary of on vacation in foreign parts. It runs just two hours, is packed with more action than you can shake a Trylon at and outside of "Gone With the Wind" has the most sheer "movie" of any recent film from the time the M-G-M Lion growls 'til "The End" puts a tentative semicolon on the doings of Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert, Hedy Lamarr and Frank Morgan.

The thought of this on a double bill is literally chilling. The benumbed extremities, the sleeping limbs, the stretchings, the groggy, fifteenth-round expressions will, as Mr. Goldwyn so rightly contends, lose friends and alienate people for the films.

So when "Boom Town" opens at the Palace Friday morning we'll be able to see it simply as a "movie," not as half of a double bill nor as a "Special" road-show attraction at stated hours. The Palace will "up" its prices somewhat—.40 plus tax for the matinees and .59 plus tax for the evenings—but the show won't go on and on and on the way it may in the places where people can vote.

Tonight, Jupiter Pluvius willing, is the night for "Rip Van Winkle" at the Sylvan. Bess Davis Schreiner and her Washington Players have been polishing up this 1895 classic that gave Joseph Jefferson one of the finest roles on the American stage. Harry Welker, now of Baltimore's Cathedral Players and The Vagabonds, but a noted local thespian before he left Washington a decade ago, has the title role in a cast that further includes Frances Brunt, Thomas M. Cahill, C. Carlton Ayers, J. Edmond Veitch, Herman P. Riess, John Van Sikken and Wade Robinson. The always effective Anne Ives was to have been in the company, too, but illness in her family forced her withdrawal. Hence Gretchen, Rip's wife, will be played by Mabel Georgi, also of Baltimore's Vagabonds. So everything's all set for what should be a notable Sylvan production. How about it, J. P.?

Only three more days and then Virginia Howe, of the Capitol Rockets, will be off for Atlantic City. Umph, says you, what's of such consummate interest in that? Thousands of Washingtonians take vacations in Atlantic City and don't have their plans bruited about in the press. Ah, but Virginia Howe is "Miss Washington of 1940" and when she steps off that train she'll be greeted with all the bowing and scraping all possible Miss Americas get before the contest. And since she's blonde and blooming there's no reason why Miss Howe should be without honor in her own home town. Good luck!

Forty miles away in Maryland's Ellicott City, tonight's the night for those writing Swanns: "Don Swann, jr., presents Lyn Swann in "Out of the Frying Pan" by Francis Swann, with seetings by Don Swann and publicity by Rita Swann."

Now to get all this straight: Rita Swann is one of Baltimore's leading and long established newspaper women. Her husband's paintings are as well known here as in Maryland. He signs them Don Swann. Lyn Swann is their daughter and she'll have one of the leads. Don Swann, jr., is producer and business manager of Ellicott City's Hilltop Theater. And Francis Swann, Don, jr's brother, merely wrote the play. His wife is the daughter of Dr. aand Mrs. Edwin B. Behrend, of 1854 Baltimore street northwest.

"Out of the Frying Pan," to get away from the relationship tangle, is a comedy the New York offices are watching closely. Its author is with the Morris Agency, has sold four short stories this summer to the American and Good Housekeeping, and has directed four summer theaters of his own. Tonight's opening is sold out, but the play will continue in the 100-year-old former female seminary atop that steep hill through Saturday evening.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Aug. 26.

Deems Taylor's been in town a week helping edit Walt Disney's "Fantasia," which opens in October. When I asked Deems if he was going to be in the picture, he said, "Well, I'am and I'm not. It's a tricky business—we're trying to keep it secret. Please don't ask me any more questions!"

HOPPER

Deems is again the house guest of Roland Young. I understand Disney is trying to get Roland for a picture. His whimsical humor would just fit. Bob Benchley doesn't begin his Disney chore till October. You'll be happy to know that 26 shorts are in production, including the return of "Mickey Mouse," and "Donald Duck" is holding his own.

Do you know how they discovered Donald's voice? Thirty-year-old Clarence Nash does it. He toured chautauqua circuit, doing bird calls and animal sounds. Later worked for a local milk company, used to visit various schools in a pony cart and give the kids a free show. When they were auditioning voices, he did "Mary Had a Little Lamb" as a frightened girl might. Walt happened to walk through, said, "Why, he sounds like a duck." So in 1934 when Donald Duck was born, Disney remembered, sent for him—he's been there ever since.

Barbara Stanwyck never makes a picture without wearing on a chain around her neck an Irish cross John Ford gave her when he directed "The Plough and the Stars," and written on it in Gaelic is "God, Mary, and Barbara be with you always." Next to that, she has a gold Jewish star from Sophie Tucker, another cross given her by Father Gillespie, and a St. Christopher from a pal—and she never makes a scene without them.

When Gary Cooper and Jimmy Gleason were making scenes in the Los Angeles ice house for "Meet John Doe," Gary cracked out with, "We look like God's frozen people." And a funny sight was a huge camera crane lifting a carton of hot coffee to a freezing electrician in the rafters.

Roz Russell and Herbert Marshall did a grand job in "Still Life," and Una O'Connor and Edmund Gwenn should be a comedy team in pictures. And I'd like to tip my hat to Heather Angle—for making herself a homely, Cockney slavey. That's going the whole way for your art and charity.

Joan Fontaine was forbidden by David Selznick to appear in "Family Album"—which she brushed aside and came through with flying colors.

George Tobias boasts the greatest appetite in town. At luncheon he polishes off three complete roast beef dinners with spaghetti, pudding, four cups of coffee and then sighs, "Gee whiz! I'm off my feed today."

When J. Farrell MacDonald, who worked in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," was doing a scene for "Meet John Doe," he got his titles mixed and said, "Meet Mr. Deeds." Director Frank Capra spoke up—"It's Mr. Doe this year"—when a heckler yelled, "It's called 'Doe,' but when you see it, it'll be 'Mr. Deeds' all over again."

Don't Scowl Like That, Mr. Douglas!

MELVYN DOUGLAS AND LORETTA YOUNG

For, after all, Miss Young is one of our more charming film players and you should be happy to costar with her in "He Stayed for Breakfast." This new comedy will succeed "The Sea Hawk" at the Earle with Eugene Pallette, Alan Marshall and Una O'Connor

Cross Roaders Revive Comic 'Vinegar Tree'

L'amour raised its beautiful head again last night at the Cross Roads Theater, l'amour with lots of laughs and snickers. "The Vinegar Tree" is the comedy, Catharine Ryan the ebullient star. And since laughter is the world's rarest quantity today its week's run can be highly recommended.

Like others of the Cross Roads' more successful ventures, "The Vinegar Tree" is no polite allegory of love in its more refined stages. It banters with the matter openly, hilariously and Howard Wentworth's cast plays it to the ultimate chuckle. By gad, sir, you're going to roar at this even if we have to throw it at you. Throw it they do, and you roar as planned.

Which is no complaint since, as we've admitted, it worked on last night's house and will for the rest of the week. Still, with a little restraint, the audience might be permitted to think it had a sense of humor of its very own.

You may recall the play but you won't recall all the lines, lines that are funny and unexpected. Laura Merrick is entertaining for the week-end a man whom she thinks she had an affair with a generation ago. Her sister, whom she hasn't seen in several marriages, is also visiting and having her affair with him at the moment.

In the Mary Boland role, Catharine Ryan is genuinely comic, but she lets her exuberance run away with her. Because she speaks so rapidly she allows her voice to raise its pitch. Surely this is a fault which one of Washington's most bewitching players can overcome.

Josephine Orendorff is outstanding in the rest of the cast. Her worldly sister is amusing and natural. Agnes Maxwell is convincing as the daughter and Allen Andrews manages some good laughs with a sullen sort of humor. Buel Patch, Forney Reese and Fred Draper round out the company.

Costumed with the excellent taste of all Cross Road productions and directed with a lively pace, "The Vinegar Tree" deserves more than its week's run in a laugh-hungry world.

The New Yorker

Horace Heidt, radio personality, is today's guest columnist for Leonard Lyons, who is on vacation.

"HELLO EVERYBODY," this is your old friend Horace Heidt speaking from way out here in Hollywood, Calif. You know that when Leonard Lyons asked me to pinch hit for him while he vacations, I readily agreed, not realizing what a task it was really going to be. Frankly, as you know, or will soon find out, I am an orchestra leader and not a writer.

MR. HEIDT

HOW MANY times have you heard your friends and acquaintances say, "Gee, I'd certainly like to be a musician, look at all the money those fellows make for just sitting there for just a half hour."

THIS IS, of course, a thoughtless statement. Or rather let us say it a comment showing lack of knowledge of the band business. When you figure out the time spent in keeping daily hotel engagements, which is aside from the two radio shows we do weekly, the band and myself are probably the busiest company in the business.

MORE ACTUAL labor, thought and proverbial midnight oil go into the preparation for these two broadcasts than in any other phase of band work.

THE FIRST and most important thing in getting ready for a program is the selection of material and the working out of musical arrangements. It must be borne in mind that continuity and numbers heard on a commercial show can be used on a broadcast usually only once. Of course, repeated requests for some of our novelty numbers often warrant our repeating them. Then again my pianist-composer, Frankie Carle, has written so many hits that we are often forced to repeat such numbers as "Sunrise Serenade" and "Falling Leaves," his latest. Then, too, on programs such as ours being on in the early evening we must try to please all types of listeners, not just the dance music crowd. So we strive for variety—novelty numbers, hot tunes, sweet swing, and the old songs, those we call "melodies that never grow old." On our Tuesday night program, we lean toward the sweet numbers, featuring our full ensemble of voices whenever possible. On Thursday evening we try to pep up our program and feature fast numbers.

AND NOW SOMETHING about the arrangement of the tunes. I think it is pretty well understood that every band, if it is to reach the top and remain there, must have a style that is distinctive and which is immediately associated with the band when it is heard on the air. This is accomplished mainly through musical arrangements and special effects. Hours and hours of work go into these arrangements. After finishing a playing engagement at 1 or 1:30 a. m., the arrangers and I frequently sit up until dawn working on numbers.

A VERY IMPORTANT part of each of our two radio programs are the men assigned to the program by the sponsor's agency and the network. Both the agency director and the radio production man help smooth out our performance and aid in the direction of the show; the engineer, helps send the program out over the air and does everything possible to give you better reception; while the announcer strives to lend force and sincerity to the commercials.

AND OUR compensation for all this, in addition to the financial return, is the pleasure we hope we are able to give you listeners and the new friends we make each week for our sponsor and ourselves. We judge the success of each radio program by your response and comment.

SO THE NEXT TIME you hear someone say, "It's easy to sit there and just play," bear in mind the actual effort that the building of a broadcast requires. Disappointment, heartache, mental, and physical work and disillusionment go into those programs, but if we achieve ultimate success with the listening public we feel it is worth it.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 26 (INS).—Errol Flynn is going to pack his costumes away in moth balls as soon as he finishes "Santa Fe Trail" and don modern clothes for "Footsteps in the Dark," a comedy melodrama. Errol hasn't been out of fancy dress since "The Green Light," nor has he made a comedy in some time.

PARSONS

Warner Brothers production chief, Hal Wallis, like every other smart producer these days, feels that movie-goers want to laugh and forget their troubles. And he tells me "Footsteps in the Dark" is just what the doctor ordered as a tonic for war jitters. It's a humorously treated mystery yarn of the "Thin Man" variety and is from a Hungarian play by Ladislaus Feodor, translated by Bernard Merivale and Jeffrey Dell. William Keighley will direct.

Leslie Howard writes friends that he has been commandeered by the British government. That means he cannot come to Hollywood to defend the suit which Dr. Eugen Franke has filed against him for alleged breach of contract. Leslie has asked that his suit be postponed until he is able to leave war-troubled Britain. He is also doing a daily broadcast which reaches America by short wave every Monday at five-thirty in the afternoon—another chore given him by the British government. Undoubtedly Dr. Franke will agree to the postponement since Leslie is doing such valiant work overseas.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Evelyn Young, Columbia stock actress, and Charles Wendling, Claudette Colbert's brother, have called the whole thing off after three years of romance; Betty Grable dancing with Desi Arnaz, her favorite rhumba partner, at Victor Hugo's. Where was Lucille Ball?, Miliza Korjus has to go back to the hospital for additional treatment; Ann Miller and George Montgomery have discovered each other; Charles Laughton, who has been appearing for the Red Cross in San Francisco, made the cross-State jaunt in his station wagon.

Robert Stack and Mary Beth Hughes at the Hollywood Tropics acting as if they really meant it; Artie Shaw sitting not far away all by his lonesome; Hedy Lamarr is looking for a house in Bel Air. She will move out of the Benedict Canyon home she and Gene Markey occupied; the Ashton Stevens, who were Gene's house guests, have gone to the redwood country before returning to Chicago; Gale Page is taking up flying and Maggie Sullavan is also taking lessons in one of hubby Leland Heyward's planes.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Byrd Demands Senate Inquiry On Defense Lag

Senator Introduces Letters From Knox, Stimson on Planes

in the office of White House Secretary Stephen T. Early, showed that while there were 4,701 Army and Navy planes on order at the start of June, the number had jumped at the latest check-up, August 17, to 6,727.

A breakdown of these figures by The Post, however, revealed the following:

Of the 6,727 on order now, only 3,250—less than half—were classed as "combat and observation types."

Of this same 6,727 now on order, 4,701 planes, or roughly two-thirds, were ordered before June 1, when the Defense Commission became active.

In other words, in the 78 days between June 1 and August 17, contracts were signed for 453 combat and observation planes, according to the Defense Commission, while Senator Byrd says they ordered only 343. The difference is 110 planes.

The commission made it a point to emphasize that the new contracts include large numbers of orders for training planes because the United States must train pilots before it can use a large fleet of combat craft.

"The talk about combat planes never includes emphasis" of this point, said Robert W. Horton, information director for the Defense Commission.

Contracts Rewritten

To keep aircraft factory wheels turning, it was explained, the Secretaries of War and Navy gave manufacturers a "letter of intent," which made it possible for them to go ahead and buy material.

Horton assured the press that all the changed contracts would be rewritten and signed again by the end of this week.

Empasizing the efforts the Defense Commission has made in the last few months, Horton said that within this week 75 per cent of the planes for which the War Department has funds would be contracted for.

Production to Rise

"The schedule of production which we have is 25,000 completed planes ready for service by July 1, 1942, which is all the planes we can use because of the necessity for additional pilots," he said.

The commission's spokesman also disclosed a swift-rising production schedule for the coming months.

Production of all kinds of planes in this country, excluding small commercial planes, is 10,000 a year at the moment, he said. According to the schedule of William S. Knudson, production member of the commission, the output of planes will be at the rate of 18,000 by January and 36,000 a year by December, 1941.

The aircraft industry at the moment, Horton stated, is running "at capacity with existing plants."

Money Is Needed

In the latter half of this year, his report set worth, the Army and Navy anticipate delivery of about 2,200 planes and 2,500 in the first half of 1941.

"It is impossible to make any contracts or commitments without that money," the Commission's report asserted in its plea for Congressional action on the supplemental defense appropriation bill.

Amplifying this, the commission said that as of July 1 there was money available for only 4,247 Army planes and 3,006 Navy planes. The Army needs funds for 14,395 craft to complete its full program, the Navy needs funds for 4,023, and the money for both is wrapped up in the $4,800,000,000 bill in Congress, the commission said.

Contractor Freed On Insurance Fraud Charges

Milton A. Cramer, Takoma Park, Md., bricklaying contractor, yesterday was acquitted on charges of attempting to defraud an insurance company by Donald A. DeLashmutt in Montgomery County Police Court at Rockville, Md.

Cramer was alleged to have made a false report to the county police that he had been held up and robbed by two men of $1,260 and later to have reported the loss to the Columbia Casualty Co. by telephone. The Casualty Co. insured him against holdup and robbery.

The defense, through Attorney Joseph B. Simpson, jr., contended that the State had proven only that Cramer intended to defraud the company, but that since he had not made written application for the money he was not guilty of an overt act. The defense in making its plea quoted a decision of Lord Chief Justice Reading, of the King's Bench, in 1915 in a similar attempt to collect from Lloyd's of London.

Raid Keeps London Up All Night

roared around and around it, dropping their bombs on the outskirts.

Several times bombers were caught in the crossbeams of powerful searchlights and jettisoned explosive cargoes to speed their escape.

So intense was the conflict that operations in Fleet street, London's newspaper row, were brought to a virtual standstill, editions being held up to await the outcome.

Jammed thousands of theatergoers were caught out by the raid and missed their last trains to suburban homes which they may or may not find intact.

Within the continual circle of the city's defenses, blinding bright, the blackout made a core of darkness so deep that the occasional flare of a match was startling.

Yet through it, some traffic continued to move.

Bombas were heard dropping on the suburbs, and in one thickly populated district tremendous explosions sounded as one raider was caught in a cross-fire of searchlights.

Apparently, the plane had jettisoned its deadly eggs in an effort to escape.

All around, the sky flashed fitfully with bombs blast and antiaircraft cannonading.

Millions crouched long in shelters, but many others insisted on staying on street corners to watch the eerie show despite frantic admonitions of air raid wardens.

[The Nazi tactics appeared to be a new sort of "follow-the-leader" routine intended to create the most damage and disturbance with the least number of planes exposed at any one time.

[In each case the peculiar sound of German plane motors first was heard in the northeast, seemed to circle about the city's tight ring of guns and spotlights, drop its bombs and whirl away toward the southeast.

[It seemed to be a sort of conveyor belt of planes and bombs, dividing at the northwest of the city, with one branch swinging around to the left and another to the right.

[Possibly hundreds of machines were required to keep that system going for half the night and some of these probably landed on the coast of France, refueled and reloaded, and joined the line-up again.]

The raiders, however, appeared baffled by the city's tight defense of barrage balloon, searchlights and clattering antiaircraft cannon.

Some lone planes leaped this deadly barrier and dashed across the center of London, however, at altitudes so high the gunfire could not reach them.

Searchlights caught some of these, and appeared to "toss" then from one to another, like basketballs in the hands of skilled players, until the antiaircraft could get a bead on them.

Even at that, observers said the full ground defenses had not yet been brought into use.

The prolonged raid on London was timed with others which struck anew from the Channel coast to the Midlands, scenes of fiery assaults all day Monday.

At Folkestone, on the Channel, during the day, at least 50 persons were acknowledged to have been slain by bombers who raided the town at market time.

The German raiders, in London and elsewhere, were making skilled use of the cover provided by fitfully drifting clouds.

In northeast England, they attacked last night and early today at time-clock intervals, flying high but dropping bombs in what seemed a hit-or-miss manner to observers on the ground.

An air ministry communique this morning, giving latest figures on plane losses in Monday's bitter fighting, said 46 German planes had been destroyed and 15 R. A. F. planes were lost, although the pilots of 11 were safe.

The Nazi night raids followed a day of unremitting attack on the British Isles which spread death from Folkstone on the Channel to the southeast corner of neutral Eire.

Persistence of the raiders, and their continual hammering at every corner of Britain lent significance to authoritative British predictions that the attack will be increasingly intensified all winter long, with no land invasion attempted before next spring.

The German Luftwaffe (air force) is finding it a tougher-than-expected job to knock out the R. A. F. and "soften up" Britain generally, the British said, so the night raids in particular are expected to be stepped up.

British reconnaissance has failed to disclose signs of concentrations on the Continent for an imminent invasion, these sources said.

The tempo and scope of the German air raids already is increasing, Monday being one of the worst periods of horror and destruction which this "tight little isle" yet has known.

The air ministry and the ministry of home security reported bomb blasts and battle from South Foreland to the Scilly Isles off Lands End.

German "balloon busters" concentrated on the Dover balloon barrage; the center of Folkestone was raided, and targets "some distance" inland suffered.

But the ministries called the afternoon raid—second of the day—on London a failure. The enemy, swarming up the Thames, were scattered, the ministries said, and a later attack on the south coast naval base of Portland was similarly dispersed.

Bombs were dropped on a municipally owned housing development on the outskirts of London in the first raid yesterday morning. But in violent battle over the southeast coast two other big forces of raiders striking at the capital were turned back.

Nazi Claim Mastery of Air Over England

maintain an attitude of complete confidence that the British are going to be beaten at home—and soon.

Sunday night raids, for instance, were concentrated on Birmingham and other industrial cities in the midlands. Today's air force reports, however, spoke chiefly of attacks on air fields in southeast England, logical area for invasion.

In the course of the day's fighting 39 British machines were shot down while only 10 German planes were lost, the Germans say.

"Preliminaries" Over

Evidence that this war has now entered its decisive stage, the Germans hold, is contained in the wording of yesterday's and today's German high command communiques. Heretofore, these communiques have characterized all raids over England as "armed reconnaissance." In describing Saturday's and Sunday's attacks on the British Isles, however, the German high command writes that its air force is engaged in the "systematic destruction of militarily vital enemy objectives."

Last week German military circles took pains to point out that "armed reconnaissance" did not represent a concentrated effort to systematically destroy military vital enemy objectives. Such an effort, they add, began Saturday and an intensification it is confidently predicted here for the immediate future.

[The "preliminaries" of the Battle of Britain are over, the authoritative Dienst aus Deutschland declares, the Associated Press said. "Now begins the planned destruction of industrial plants essential to war."

[The United Press reported further that German quarters are hinting a "grand mass attack" against Britain may be imminent.]

Birmingham Raided

In the course of Sunday night "numerous German bombers attacked airplane and munitions factories at Birmingham, Kingston and Coventry." Their bombs, the Germans assert, caused terrific explosions and widespread fires. In Birmingham, the Germans declare, some 60 to 70 of their bombers each dropped an average of more than 1 ton of bombs.

All their planes returned safely from the Birmingham raid, the Germans add, while one of their reconnaissance pilots reported after having flown over Birmingham yesterday morning that he saw large fires and lots of smoke about the freight railway station as well as the industrial section between Astor and Castle Bromwich.

During Sunday other German bombing units are reported to have effectively attacked the flying field at Warmwell, northwest of Portland, while some 225 miles west of Lands End, a German plane sank a merchantman.

Mines, meanwhile, continue to be laid by German planes in important British harbors.

In addition, the Germans report two of their submarines sank a total of 76,170 tons of enemy shipping.

The official news agency, DNB, reported it had learned from the German high command that in addition to the attacks announced Sunday as having taken place during the night from the 24th and 25th, nine other enemy airfields, as well as harbor appointments, industrial and munitions factories, railway lines, and antiaircraft batteries in 38 different places were raided, and that a total of 165 tons of bombs was dropped.

Particularly serious explosions and fire, the Germans claim, were caused in the harbors of Cardiff and Weymouth, the drydocks at Newcastle, and industrial plants in Billingham and Middleborough. The total number of bombs dropped by German fliers in the course of this particular night, it is reported here, was 15,000 with a total weight of about 230,000 pounds, or 165 tons.

The German government, meanwhile, through the Swiss government, is reported to have informed the British government that in six cases British fliers have fired upon German Red Cross planes engaged in rescuing pilots shot down over the Channel or forced to land on water.

The German note is believed to have informed Britain that such actions would not "remain without consequences."

Yesterday's German high command communique places the total of enemy airplane losses Sunday at 72, 51 of which were shot down in dog fights with 21 by antiaircraft batteries or destroyed on the ground. In addition the Germans declare, four British machines were forced to land on the Channel Sunday night.

Willkie Urges Head For Defense Board

said, "can possibly give time or consideration to all the problems that such a board has to solve."

Willkie asserted that the absence of a "directing head" leads to "jealousies, discord, inefficiency and failure."

"At the moment," he said, "we are engaged purely in a problem of production. This Administration has no experience in practical organization or production, and therefore it doesn't know how to make such things effective."

Willkie said that if William S. Knudsen, an automobile executive now serving on the Defense Commission, were placed at the head of the body, he "would have planes, tanks and other mechanized equipment rolling off the assembly lines in much better time."

The President, he declared, should make public a report filed by the old War Resources Board, which was headed by Edward R. Stettinius, jr.

Besides blaming any lag in the plane program on failure of Congress to pass theh appropriation bill, the commission said much "confusion" has been caused by changes in the Vinson-Trammell Act profit limits.

The prevoious limit of 12 per cent profit on aircraft contracts was lowered in July to 8 per cent for competitive bidding contracts and 7 per cent for negotiated contracts.

This required rewriting of many of the contracts, Horton said, adding that only 33 had been rewritten and signed at a late check-up.

The nominee asserted that while he had not seen the report, he was "satisfied that it recommended a method for obtaining a functioning defense organization."

Vacationers Begin Road Back to Capital

Count Jerzy Potocki, the Guest Of Mrs. Vanderbilt at Newport, Is Among Those Already Returned

By Hope Ridings Miller

"AFTER LABOR DAY" seems to be the tagline for every vacationer's plan to return home. So, through this week you can expect society news to center on comings and goings, with a strong accent on end-of-summer partying at beach and mountain resorts.

A few of our celebrities have beat the gun a few days, however, and already are back in town. The Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, returned yesterday from Newport where he was the week-end guest of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt at Beaulieu, her summer estate.

Hope Ridings Miller

Newport, "queen of resorts," seems to be retaining her gay pace right up to season's end. Arthur Bradley Campbell, who has been giving a couple of diamond-studded parties a week all summer, has planned two dinners the next few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Snowden A. Fahnestock entertained at dinner at Ker Avor, their Newport place, Saturday night; and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Drummond Wolff were hosts at a mammoth cocktail party at Bailey's Beach that afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, jr., who have been visiting the former's mother at Hammersmith Farm, Newport, for several days, will return to their place at Watch Hill, R. I., this week. They are expected to be back at Merrywood the middle of September.

WASHINGTON NAMES generously dotted the guest list for the swanky supper given by Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Marburg at the Bar Harbor Club Sunday night. Guests of honor were Archduke Otto of Austria and Archduchess Elizabeth, and the fete wrote a glamorous chapter in the resort's social history. Among the guests were Prince Burnhaneddin, Prince Osman, Mrs. Nathan C. Wyeth, Mrs. Peter Augustus Jay, all of Washington; Mr. and Mr William Bell Watkins, of Annefield, Berryville, Va., and more than a hundred others.

CIRCLED IN RED on Saratoga's calendar for this evening is that American Carnival for Britain you've been hearing about. You can always count on the powers that be to whip up something exciting for the final week at the country's most colorful racing spa; so thanks to George H. Bull, president of the racing association, and Mrs. Sydney J. Smith, vice chairman of the fete, tonight's fete promises to bring out the bigwigs in droves.

Other special events on Saratoga's schedule for the next few days include the Lady Owners' race on Thursday, and the running of the Whitney Special a week from today. Mrs. Payne Whitney and her son, John Hay Whitney, have invited a large group of guests to accompany them to that event, which will wind up the Saratoga season.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY of State Adolf A. Berle, jr., and Mrs. Berle entertained at dinner Sunday night at their summer home at Great Barrington, Mass. Their guests were Miss Mildred Thompson, dean of Vassar College, who has visited the Berles in Washington; Dr. Charles C. Griffin, of Vassar, American exchange professor to Venezuela; Mrs. Griffin, Mrs. Frederic A. Keep, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sterner, and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bradford.

The Argentine Ambassador and Mme. Espil, who are at Hot Springs, Va., were hosts at a dinner there on Saturday night for Mrs. Ballard Moore, William F. White, Mrs. Morton Hutchinson, and Mrs. Emmons Smith and Stewart McDonald, whose current romance indicates wedding bells soon.

CLOSER HOME: Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hatch gathered in a congenial group of guests for an informal party Saturday evening at Millstone Farm, their home near Burke, Va. A lively round of political talk, before a crackling open fire, vied in interest with personally conducted tours to Mr. Hatch's newly constructed dam. Among the guests were Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Horgan, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Graham, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mrs. Junior Owens, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Van Deusen, George Abell, Hugo Rennert and a number of Virginia neighbors who dropped in early—and stayed late—to enjoy the pleasantly informal party.

Mr. and Mrs. Hatch, incidentally, spent Sunday at Gibson Island as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jones (she's the former Mrs. Pendleton Mayo, you know).

FROM THE SOUTH comes word that Miss Reba Doughton, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, is convalescing at Davis Hospital, Statesville, following a fall from a horse. She expects to return to her home in Laurel Springs, N. C., early next week and plans to be back in Washington in the autumn.

And from the North—there's news that Sir Evelyn and Lady Wrench, of London, will arrive at the Plaza Hotel in New York this week. They are expected to visit Washington.

Sir Evelyn is chairman and founder of the English Speaking Union and the Overseas Union. He has served as a major in the Royal Air Force and as private secretary to the president of the air ministry.

Fergusons Have Washington Guests At Westport, N. Y.

Federal Trade Commissioner and Mrs. Garland S. Ferguson have as their guests at Westport, N. Y., their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Garland S. Ferguson, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Purcell, all of Washington.

The Fergusons recently moved into the Barksdale lake shore estate which they purchased while visiting Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sabin, of Washington, at Mapledene, their summer home at Westport.

Popular Richardson Girls Center of Gay Social Activity

Sisters Will Attend Round of Parties At Their Home in Fairfax Before Leaving Soon to Visit at Myrtle Beach, S. C.

Although this is technically the dull season in the Capital, the popular daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Dawson Richardson, of White House, Fairfax, Va., have found themselves the center of a flurry of activity and entertainment.

Miss Randolph Richardson (Randy to all her friends) has just had as house guest her cousin, Miss Sally McCandlish, of Hancock, Md., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCandlish. Mr. McCandlish is a brother of Mrs. Richardson. Sally, who left White House a day or so ago, will be back Saturday for another round of parties before all three girls, Randolph, Sally and Phyllis, leave for Myrtle Beach, S. C., where they will be house guests of Mrs. Allard H. Gasque. Mrs. Gasque, wife of the late Representative Gasque, served out her husband's term in the House, and is the only woman from South Carolina ever to have filled such an office.

Miss Phyllis Richardson has just returned from a jaunt about the countryside, which included a visit to Miss Jane Leininger, of Bronxville, N. Y.

In the meantime, their mother, Mrs. Richardson, has been pretty much on the go herself. She returned just yesterday from a trip to Virginia Beach, where she and Mrs. Anna B. Wickes, who accompanied her, were widely entertained during their stay. Mrs. Wickes, also a Virginian, owns the lovely home next to Mount Vernon.

Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. Wickes, who arrived in Virginia Beach Wednesday, were the house guests of Col. and Mrs. George Waddel at their cottage there. On Friday the Waddells entertained for their guests at luncheon at the Surf Club, and earlier that afternoon they were feted at a cocktail party by Mrs. Samuel Patterson at her new home near the Colony Club. Mrs. Patterson makes her home at the Mayflower Hotel here during the winter season.

Mrs. Woodward Gives Party For Mrs. Wisner

Social Security Aide Entertains With Cocktails

Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, of the Social Security Board, entertained informally yesterday afternoon at cocktails in her apartment in the Westchester in honor of Mrs. Frank Wisner, of Laurel, Miss., and New York City.

Receiving in the drawing room, Mrs. Woodward was gowned in a white crepe, street-length sport frock, fashioned with accordian pleated skirt and sleeves, and accented with blue costume jewelry. Mrs. Wisner wore a black and white silk print, also street length. With it she wore a pancake hat of white flowers, trimmed in black velvet ribbon, and a corsage of gardenias.

A profusion of dark red dahlias filled the drawing room, and pink roses and blue delphiniums centered the table in the dining room. The table was lighted with tall white tapers.

Mrs. Pat Harrison Among the Guests

Guests included Mrs. Pat Harrison, wife of the Senator from Mississippi; Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State; Mrs. Paul H. Appleby, wife of the Undersecretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Jewel Swofford, chairman of the United States Employes Compensation Commission; Mrs. Herron Pearson, wife of the Representative from Tennessee, and Mrs. Ruth Shipley, chief of the passport division of the State Department.

Also Mrs. Florence S. Kerr, Assistant Commissioner of the Works Projects Administration; Judge Lucy S. Howorth, associate member of the Veterans' Appeals Board; Mrs. Eugene O. Sykes, wife of Judge Sykes; Mrs. John Tyson, wife of Judge Tyson, of the Court of Tax Appeals; Miss Nell Tyson, Mrs. Wilson Compton, Mrs. Robert Barnett, Mrs. James Welch; Mrs. Mary Buford, of the State Department; Mrs. Vernon Holleman, Mrs. J. S. Haliburton and Mrs. George Holmes.

Mrs. Compton Also Honors Mrs. Wisner

Mrs. Wisner, who is in Washington for only a brief stay, was the guest last night of Mrs. Wilson Compton at the Comptons' country estate in nearby Virginia.

Mrs. Woodward entertained at breakfast on Sunday morning at her apartment in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bane, of Chicago. Mr. Bane is here temporarily on a special assignment on the new Defense Board. Other guests at the breakfast included Miss Harriet Elliot, the woman member of the President's new Defense Commission, and Mrs. Ellen Commons. Mrs. Woodward will leave Washington soon on a field trip inspection tour, which will include a program of speeches throughout the country.

Cornwells Back From a Week-End On Long Island

J. Leighton Cornwell, special assistant to the Attorney General, and Mrs. Cornwell returned yesterday from East Moriches, Long Island, where they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor over the week-end.

On Sunday the fourteenth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Cornwell was celebrated at the Taylor home, Val Mar. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. English, of the Valley Vista Apartments, Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Cornwell make their home at 4421 Forty-fifth street.

Former Larieta B. Bogue And Mr. Axtell on Honeymoon

Couple Married in New York Avenue Presbyterian Church; Will Make Home In Washington After Brief Journey

Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Axtell, united in marriage on Saturday, are now on a brief wedding trip. They will make their home in Washington. The bride is the former Miss Larieta B. Bogue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. M. Bogue, of Andover, Ohio.

Soft candlelight and baskets of gladioli interspersed with palms, served as a background for the 3 o'clock ceremony at which the Rev. Albert Evans officiated in the historic Lincoln Chapel of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

The bride appeared in a powder blue jacket costume, set off with a matching flower hat and a bouquet of sweetheart roses. She was given in marriage by her father.

Miss Genevieve Hazle, of Loveland, Colo., served as bridesmaid. Her shell pink frock was worn with a matching flower hat, and she had a corsage of delphinium and roses. Joseph A. Leech, of Greensburg, Pa., was best man.

Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of Mrs. Ruth Murphy and Miss Bonita Sweet, aunt of the bride. A tiered wedding cake, iced with pink and white roses and flanked with tall white tapers, centered the beautifully appointed table. Mrs. Bogue, mother of the bride, was gowned in blue and wore a corsage of roses.

Out-of-town guests included the bride's parents, her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Bigony, and their son, Edward Allan, of Williamsburg, Ohio, and the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Harry Thomas, and her daughter, Martha Jane, of Baltimore.

Marcy Morgan, Regatta Queen, Picks Attendants

Miss Marcy Morgan, queen of the President's Cup Regatta, has made partial selection of her attendants for the festivities in connection with the crowning ceremonies September 28.

Several of those chosen were her classmates at the Holton Arms School, including Miss Joan McKenna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Royal McKenna; Miss Nancy Strong, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. A. G. Strong; Miss Margheritta Stirling, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. Calhoun Stirling; Miss Jacqueline Meredith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Payne Meredith; Miss Isabelle Hagner, daughter of Mrs. Randall H. Hagner; the Misses Marion and Marie Theresa Norris, daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris; Miss Catherine Reeves, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Reeves, and Miss Patsy Brewer, daughter of Mrs. Alva Brewer.

Mrs. M. J. Ferris Engaged to Wed George E. Clark

Mr. and Mrs. Rodney S. Jarvis, of New York and Great Barrington, Mass., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Margery Jarvis Ferris, of Darien, Conn., to George E. Clark, of New York. Mrs. Ferris is a granddaughter of the late Gen. Jay Hale Sypher and the late Mrs. Sypher, of Washington. She attended Miss Porter's School and is a member of the Junior League.

Mr. Clark is a son of Roy Wallace Clark, of St. Paul, and the late Mrs. Clark. He was graduated from Princeton in 1929 and is a member of the Elm Club. He is treasurer of the Adams Express Co. The wedding will take place early in the autumn.

Phillip Gullion Named Model By Fraternity

Selection Is Made By Phi Delta Theta At Minneapolis

Phillip Gullion, son of the Judge Advocate General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, and Mrs. Gullion, of Washington, has been chosen as the model initiate for Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

The selection was made yesterday at the organization's biennial convention for the United States and Canada at Minneapolis. The initiation ceremony will take place there tonight.

Mr. Gullion will return to Centre College in Danville, Ky., next month, entering his sophomore year. Gen. Gullion is an alumnus of Centre.

Miss O'Connor, Mr. English Wed

The Shrine of the Sacred Heart yesterday was the scene of a nuptial mass when Miss Gertrude O'Connor, daughter of the late Mr. aand Mrs. Charles O'Connor, of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., became the bride of Frank W. English, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. English, of Syracuse, N. Y. The Rev. Lawrence J. Wempe, officiated at the 9 a. m. ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Francis J. O'Connor, of Buffalo, N. Y. She was gowned in white silk jersey, fashioned with elbow length sleeves and a draped hemline. Her floor-length tulle veil was draped with nunlike simplicity over her hair, and she carried a white prayer book to which were pinned a cluster of orchids.

Miss Honora O'Connor, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She was gowned in blue chiffon over taffetta, worn with a white hat and white accessories. She carried a sheaf of pink roses and blue delphiniums. Best man was Donald J. O'Connor, of New York City, a college classmate of the bridegroom, but no relation to the bride.

After the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast at the Mayflower Hotel for the members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests. When the couple left for their wedding trip, the bride was wearing a navy blue coat, cut on princess lines, over a costume of Navy blue. Her accessories were of matching shade. The bride was educated at St. Joseph's College in Emmitsburg, Md., and Mr. English was graduated from Syracuse University. He is connected with the Social Security Board in Syracuse.

Mrs. Wirtz Home After Texas Visit

Mrs. Alvin Wirtz, wife of the Undersecretary of the Interior, has returned to her apartment at the Shoreham after spending several months in Texas.

She visited relatives in Galveston and then went to her home in Austin for an extended stay.

Earlene White, Clubwomen's Head, Cites Difference in Sincerity, Emotionalism

THE OTHER DAY I was talking to Earlene White, honorary president of the National Federatoion of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. I remarked concerning a certain group of women who had recently created a public disturbance in connection with their stand on a national issue, that I believed they were sincere although mistaken.

"Do you mean sincere, or emotionally aroused?" she asked.

It had not occurred to me before what a vast difference there was between the two.

"Sincerity," she went on, "is a deep conviction, founded on intelligent, clear thinking and devotion to a principle. With it goes a definite dignity. Susan B. Anthony worked for years for the ideal to which she devoted her life, but she always mantained her dignity. She was never blinded by emotionalism. Carrie Chapman Catt, suffrage and peace leader, presented a similar example of steadfastness of purpose and dignified, intelligent endeavor toward an end."

Emotionalism, Miss White pointed out, is dangerous in whichever way it goes because it can as easily be swayed in an opposite direction. It has no stability, knows no devotion to principle nor sincerity of purpose. It is "a reed shaken by the wind" and an easy prey to "Fifth Columnists."

FEDERATION FUND — After this talk with Miss White, I returned to my desk to find a heartening announcement from the General Federation of Women's Clubs of a fund to be established in observance of its golden jubilee, the interest to be used for a national program for the preservation of American democracy.

Every club, city and State is asked to conduct a jubilee Americanism meeting to raise money for this fund. Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president, and Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, vice president and chairman of the golden jubilee committee, have announced.

Details of the plan are given in the September issue of the Clubwoman G. F. W. C. The article says, in part:

"In an organization of 2,000,000 women, the primary objectives should be—intelligent deliberation of the problems of the day, the development of public opinion, and the carrying out of definite plans after such deliberation. During this chaotic period we have added responsibility.

"We must reaffirm our faith in and revitalize the meaning of democracy; we should be intelligently informed about the progress of the various national defense activities; we could help the Federal Bureau of Investigation to rid this country of "Fifth Columnists," not through active spying and "witch hunting" but with intelligence and discernment; we must teach true Americanism to those isolated groups, whose members are victims of "Fifth Columnists," or who do not understand the real benefits derived in a democracy.

"During the next year let us dedicate ourselves to the preservation of American ideals and liberties through the medium of patriotic jubilee meetings. Let us raise money at these meetings, such funds to be sent to the general federation as a birthday gift, the interest from such a fund to be used for a national program for the preservation of American democracy and for any other emergency that might arise during the next few years which will necessitate clubwomen's participation in the defense and peace of our country."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Baffled by Changeable Moods of Girl He Loves, Man Asks Whether to Give Up or Keep on Courting

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For some time I have been going with a girl who is two years my senior. She is a quiet person, but likes a good time. We have had several minor arguments; nothing serious. I am very much in love with her and I believe it is mutual. She is very affectionate at times, and very distant other times. When I meet her on the street she always seems cold. Yet I may see her that evening and she is entirely different. Really, this has me puzzled.

On a recent evening she acted as if she were in a trance. She even said she didn't care what happened to her. She blamed no one for her attitude; said she was neither angry nor ill, and wouldn't tell me what the trouble was. She said she just couldn't explain it. When I kissed her good night, she said if ever she got in that mood again she was going to call the whole thing off—as she wouldn't expect any man to put up with it.

Please tell me what I should do, Miss Haworth. Should I give her up? Or should I continue seeing her until I find out the trouble? She seems to like my attentions. P. W. B.

Don't Be Discouraged By Girl's Behavior

DEAR P. W. B.: If you love the girl and have reason to believe that she loves you, take her shy (which is to say, her "cold") moods in your stride, without seeming to notice them; and be sympathetic to her "withdrawn" moods, without taking them too seriously. In other words, don't press her for explanations, eye her anxiously, clumsily labor to cheer her up, and finally announce desperately that maybe you'd better get going and here's hoping she manages to snap out of it soon.

Let her know that you love her in her every mood and find it no task at all to string along with her until the clouds pass by. Don't put her on the defensive, nor allow her to take the defensive, above her strange behavior. If she apologizes and deprecates, tell her to "forget it," that everybody of more than moron intelligence has his low moments occasionally, that you are her pal and here's your shoulder to lean on until she feels better; as I am sure she promptly will, if you take this amiable, unquestioning, dependable attitude.

The girl's variable attitude—as described—is typical, firstly, of the adolescent maiden, whose emotional burgeoning has her fluctuating constantly between laughter and tears, shyness and boisterousness, exaltation and depression, and love and detestation of her intimates. It is typical, secondly, of the "introverted" temperament at almost any age—by which I mean the person who is more preoccupied with his own thoughts and tangled feelings than he is attentive to the world at large and the people in it. Thirdly, it is a personality phenomenon peculiar to women who are suffering unawarely from emotional frigidity—which is to say, the inability (stemming from ingrained, poisonously ugly misconcepts of sexuality) to give and receive love wholeheartedly and happily.

I imagine the girl's whole repertory of moods, at present, is directly related to her feeling for you, and colored as much by her inhibitions as by her amorous urges. But her baffling behavior should not be construed as meaning that she doesn't care for you. On the contrary, I think her attitude indicates that she is deeply affected.

No doubt she is telling the truth when she says she can't explain why she feels and acts as she does. Like most of us, she probably just doesn't understand herself, and she hasn't yet learned the socially protective wisdom of NOT wearing one's feelings on one's sleeve. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems: Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Sliding Walls, Hidden Beds Enliven Homes

Bath That Turns Into Photographic Dark Room Among New Wrinkles

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE ARCHITECTS are going to town these days . . . in fact it looks like they'll be giving the furniture designers quite a run for their money what with all their bright notions about furniture that comes out of the wall, or sometimes it would seem it comes from nowhere at all. Our notebook is popping its covers with architectural tricks we've jotted down in our recent rounds.

The cleverest idea we've seen in a great while is a combination room that includes the dining room guest room and game room all in one. The secret of the room's triple talents is a sliding partition which closes off one end for guests, this part of the room has a built-in studio bed. In front of the guest room there is a comfortable useful sofa. A small guest bath opens off of the guest room—this by a flip here and a flap there transforms itself into a dark room for photography. In this same big room there's a dining table that comes out of the wall to reveal a window filled with glass shelves. On another wall a sliding partition opens onto a refreshment counter which partitions off the kitchen and makes service gay and easy for informal occasions.

Home Office Combined

Another room of architectural ingenuity concealed an office behind a pair of double doors which when opened revealed cubby holes and drawers for complete desk equipment. I naddition to this is a broad top desk slid out to hold a typewriter. Fit into this intricate arrangement was a matching typing chair. We've seen the same worked out with a sewing room behind a door, with a large cutting table ha lfed down, racks for patterns and drawers and shelves for materials. More and more all closets are being specially designed with shelves and drawers and pgeon holes to make best use of all the space. While tiers of drawers built into the walls of bedrooms or bathrooms can be quite attractive and of course they're enormously useful.

Tricky Bed

The built in sofa that turns itself into an upper and lower berth at night for extra guests is beginning to appear in exhibits and it promises a lot of convenience for the future.

Sliding walls are just beginning to show what they can do. They're not only providing partitions when needed between rooms, but they're opening entire rooms or entire sides of houses into the garden.

The Humanity Lover

(Mrs. Aurelia Puffer-Swagg, noted authority on front, who is substituting in this column for Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, now on vacation, presents today another of her catechisms, "How to Put Up Front in Public Movements.")

Q—What is the first thing for the woman climbing the social ladder by means of charitable or civic service to remember?

Mrs. Puffer-Swagg

A—To get started with the Right Cause.

Q—How can she select the Right Cause?

A—By reason of the Right Names it contains.

Q—Is the mere fact that she wants to help a worthy project sufficient for her to crash the Right Cause?

A—No, indeed! To make the right charity board often is a lifetime achievement.

Q—How then should the ambitious lover of humanity start on her career?

A—At present by doing war work.

Q—How may she make a right start in this?

A—By selecting, if possible, a small, exclusive private group that meets at some important homes. Failing this, she should select a public group with the Best Names, going, if necessary, far out of her neighborhood to do this.

Q—Should the humanity lover devote all her time to war relief?

A—No, indeed, though it may be the means of making valuable social contacts for later use. However, she should bear in mind her own future if and when peace comes, and act accordingly.

Q—How should she "act accordingly?"

A—By building up a connection with either a charitable or civic group that is detained to go on forever.

Q—How can she crash such a group?

A—She may take the long way of working up from the ground through a long-established, socially important group, or take a chance and join some new movement sponsored by ritzy newcomers.

Q—What should she remember in choosing a charity?

A—To get into the A or B grade, if possible.

Q—What is a grade A charity?

A—One that is composed chiefly of cave-dwelling dowagers and that is well endowed and requires little work from the members except the organizing of debs to do things in costume.

Q—What is a grade B charity?

A—One containing many of the Best Names but with no endowment and one that requires a good deal of work from its members.

Q—What are C and D charities?

A—A C charity does much valuable work, but it contains many social upstarts and has a hard time raising its budget. A D charity is composed of those trying to get a foothold.

Q—If the embryo Lady Bountiful manages to break into an A or B charity what is her best means of advancement?

A—Large contributions.

Q—But suppose she hasn't much money?

A—Then she must cheerfully volunteer to do all the dirty work.

Q—To what will this lead in time?

A—Office in the organization and eventually supreme triumph—membership on the board.

Q—Can the ambitious public servant get anywhere socially by going in for reform?

A—Yes, provided it is a "smart," exclusive reform.

Q—What should she avoid at all costs?

A—The popular middle class movements.

Q—If the apprentice uplifter or Big Sister persists faithfully and cannily in her career what is her ultimate reward?

A—To be known socially in her old age as a dowager of importance and to be solicited to "lend her name" to give prestige to public movements.

Beauty Secrets

The Helpful Geranium

THE SPICY fragrance and velvety petals of the geranium is known to all. Rose geranium jelly was a favorite of our grandmothers. The geranium has long been used in medicines. Now the virtues of this flower are being incorporated into geranium cream that has also a number of virtues. In effect it is a "double doer." By day it may be used as a foundation for make-up, and ably serve as a wind and sun protector. At night it makes a proficient "smoother outer" of wrinkles, particularly those eye lines resulting from laughing. Geranium cream has a way of giving the skin a firmer and clearer surface, and should be a favorite of those interested in a cream that is all-purpose.

The manufacturer of this beneficial cream has also given thought to the woman who lets her skin's loveliness vanish because of just plain neglect or too much sun and water. Heavy facial oil has been made to cope adequately with eye lines and circles. In all, there are eight oils incorporated in this product.

Straight Lines Of New Frocks Need Relief

Unique Peruvian Trinkets Will Supply The Proper Touch

By Marshall Adams

The Post Fashion Editor.

ONE of the real problems emanating from the new straight and narrow dress is the sudden sharpness of silhouette, very much at variance with the full-skirted frocks worn all summer long.

What to do about these new "close-lipped" dresses? Since "everyone" will follow the new silhouette, becoming or not, one solution lies in the sparkle of costume jewelry which will relieve the new staccato lines. Nothing draws the eye away from lean, narrow lines as does a touch of something glittering and shiny. The same gleam of jewelry may be lost on a full-skirted "busy" dirndl.

Budget Priced

The jewels we recommend aren't necessarily heirloom or luxury pieces, but ones easily afforded by the working girl who will spend around $16.95 for a good black dress this month or next.

Of moderate price but undeniably rich-looking are the new Peruvian pieces designed by the Silson brothers—famous costume jewelers, who were inspired by a collection of old silver antiques brought back from South America by Art Collector Helena Rubinstein.

One necklace is named "Dance of the Angels," because it is comprised of tiny silver Peruvian dancing men performing their ceremonials around medallions embossed with the features of an enchanting moon goddess. You can imagine what these picturesque and amusing little creatures dangling around a high, severe collarline would do for one's spirits.

Good-Luck Charms

For the side-draped bodice, a touch of wit and brightness might be achieved with a large, decorative pin, rather than a necklace. One of the cleverest adapted by the Silsons is the "Circle of Light," so-called because of the silver fish, native Peruvian symbol of light and plenty, attached to a large, round bangle-pin. Then there is the "Key to Heaven," a winged key believed by the primitives of Peru to help in their ascent from the nether regions.

If good fortune is what you need, howveer, with your first black costume, there is a chatelaine (bunch of chains with trinkets attached) of keys with clenched hands, which, according to South American folklore, means good luck.

Fire-Proof Fabrics

Thank the chemists for another fire protection—the fire retardants that are now applied to fabrics to flameproof them. These drastically cut down fire losses. Draperies, as well as clothing, are now being treated with these new chemicals. Velvets, velours and other nap fabrics, which can flash into flame instantly, now serve to safeguard a life when so processed

More Exercise, Not Work, Need Of Housewives

That and Fewer Calories; Housework No Aid to Reducing

By Ida Jean Kane.

A leading doctor has come out with the typically masculine observation that housework isn't work, that there isn't enough work in modern housekeeping to keep weight down. And that's the reason, he contends, there are more fat women than fat men!

Well, now . . . it seems to us that the good doctor's deductions are wrong! It isn't that women don't have enough work to do! It's that housework is not reducing and never has been. The old-fashioned housewife certainly did not enjoy any labor-saving devices and she was less streamlined than the modern Missus.

The big portion of housework uses the small muscles of the hands, feet and arms, and does not burn many calories. Washing dishes, peeling potatoes, cooking and the endless work involved in meal preparation all burn comparatively few calories.

Food Too Tempting

The greatest exchange of energy takes place in the large muscles. Scrubbing floors, sweeping, washing windows, use the large muscles but these tasks are not usually part of the day's routine.

But the worst thing about housework is that the housewife is around food so much of the time that she is constantly tempted to overeat. First, there's breakfast for the entire family. Then she must see that the children have a nourishing lunch. And friends drop in during the afternoon and expect tea. And by evening, when she would be better off for a nice, light supper, the head of the house comes home tired from a day at the office and wants a hearty dinner. Being a good wife, she goes out of her way to excel in cooking the foods he likes—and they are apt to be the fattening dishes!

It's true, there are more overweight housewives than there are overweight business men. Statistics leave no doubt about it! But let's put the blame where it belongs—on the necessity for being around food all day and the lack of time and energy for vigorous activity rather than on the absurd assumption that she hasn't enough to do!

Needs Exercises

It isn't more work the housewife needs to keep her weight down, it's fewer calories. And, in addition, she must have specific exercises to tone the figure controlling muscles which are missed in housework. Fifteen minutes of calisthenics will do more toward keeping her figure lovely—and slim in the middle—than eight hours' housework. We suggest that the exercises be taken in mid-morning before she wears herself out at a job that doesn't do a thing for her figure. Here are two simple but effective exercises!

POSITION: Standing on the knees, which are slightly apart, arms straight out at the sides, shoulder-level.

MOVEMENT: Bend at the waist and touch alternate fingertips to floor at the sides. Repeat 50 times. Keep the midsection pulled up and firm. Never for a minute slump, or you cheat on the exercise. If kneeling hurts your knees, use a small pillow.

POSITION: Same position on knees, feet separated in back, but with arms stretched overhead and hands clasped. Pull slim through the middle!

MOVEMENT: Arc the body to the left, bending at the waist, as you sit back on the right foot without lowering arms. Still stretching arms overhead, come up to original position. Then arc to the right as you sit back on left foot. Repeat slowly 25 times.

Fresh Plums

Valuable in Diet

PLUMS are very plentiful in the markets now. This is a fruit of great variety, for there are yellow, green, red, blue, purple and black ones. They also vary as much in size, sweetness and flavor as they do in color. Because they contain acids, plums are valuable in the diet.

Damson plums are a favorite with many for making preserves. Goose plums, the small red ones, make delicious jelly and jam, and many like green gage ones for making preserves, too.

Blue plum conserve is also a delicious "spread." This is the way you make it.

Blue Plum Conserve

Peel and chop the thin yellow rind of 2 oranges and 1 lemon. To the rind add the juice and chopped pulp of 3 oranges and 1 lemon, 1¼ pounds seeded raisins, ground, and 9 cups sugar. Seed 5 pounds blue plums and add to the other mixture. Cook the conserve slowly until it is fairly thick. Add ½ pound broken walnut meats and cook 10 minutes longer. Put into sterilized containers and seal.

A WOMAN'S

WASHINGTON

By JEAN BROWNELL

Running Stamp Shop, Memory Course in Itself, Proprietress Says

THERE'S nothing like running a stamp shop to improve your memory, says Mrs. Katie Weeks, only woman in Washington to cater to philatelists. Her knowledge of stamps was sketchy when she started the shop four years ago; now she has a mental file of all 45,000 items in her stock, not to mention the extensive collections of all her customers.

MRS. WEEKS

She smiles to herself when a woman comes to the shop for the first time and makes a purchase "for my nephew." Invariably it develops that she collects herself, but feels it's beneath her dignity to say so. Among Mrs. Weeks' customers are women collectors whose husbands think they're crazy, and vice versa. The Weeks family has no such problem, however. Mr. Weeks, a public school teacher, is a philatelist himself; he spends Saturdays and vacations periods helping around the shop, which is located at 806 Seventeenth street northwest.

Their 11-year-old daughter also collects, but in a less businesslike manner. "If someone admires a stamp in her collection, she just gives it to him," Mrs. Weeks says.

TODAY'S CAB DRIVER is a handsome young blond whose identification card reads "King Edward Lear." The name is not the figment of a literary imagination; he was christened that way. Moreover, he's a descendant of Tobias Lear, George Washington's secretary, and likes nothing better than to drive a fare to Collingwood, which once was the home of his distinguished ancestor.

Mrs. Tony Wakeman recommends jury duty to the woman who feels ignorant about the working of the law courts. She recently served a term in District Court and declares, "It was an education to me." In addition to receiving $4 a day and making herself a turban in odd moments, she met a lot of interesting people of all types. She also gained a new respect for Washington courts. "I'd certainly hate to be caught at anything," she says. "They make it tough for you."

When Garfinckel's closed out its knitting department, the principal beneficiary was Barney Neighborhood House, which was presented with several large cartons of yarn and needlepoint materials. The settlement, well known for the high quality of its crafts, plans to use part of the yarn to make afghans for the Red Cross.

The best place for celebrity hunters to snare wives of diplomats is in a little flower shop on Dupont Circle, which serves two-thirds of the embassy set. A true continental lady may delegate to others such domestic duties as buying groceries, but she always shops for her flowers in person.

Speech Making Self-Taught

A GUEST at the club she'd like to join—but she muffs her big opportunity to show she's club "material" because she knows nothing of public speaking.

When the president extends the club's cordial greetings, she rises nervously, clutches the table and stammers, "Oh dear, I didn't know I'd have to talk." How she embarrasses the unlucky member who brought her!

She might so easily have faced the club with charm and confidence if she'd learned the correct, gracious thing to say: "Thank you, Madame President and members of the Wednesday Club. It's a real pleasure to take part in one of your stimulating meetings . . .

Speaking in public is so much simpler than you think. To overcome tenseness, learn the essentials of a good "platform manner." If seated at a table, take time to rise unhurriedly, gracefully. Then stand at ease—with weight evenly distributed on the balls of feet, arms at your sides. Pausing a few seconds before beginning to talk helps you marshal your forces, feel more confident.

So your voice won't play you tricks—become nervously shrill or "stuttery," practice working your voice-machine efficiently. Draw air into the lungs slowly and steadily, pushing out abdomen and ribs and lifting your chest. Then slowly exhale till abdomen seems flat against your spine.

And, of course, in any group you speak with greater assurance if you are familiar with the rules of parliamentary procedure.

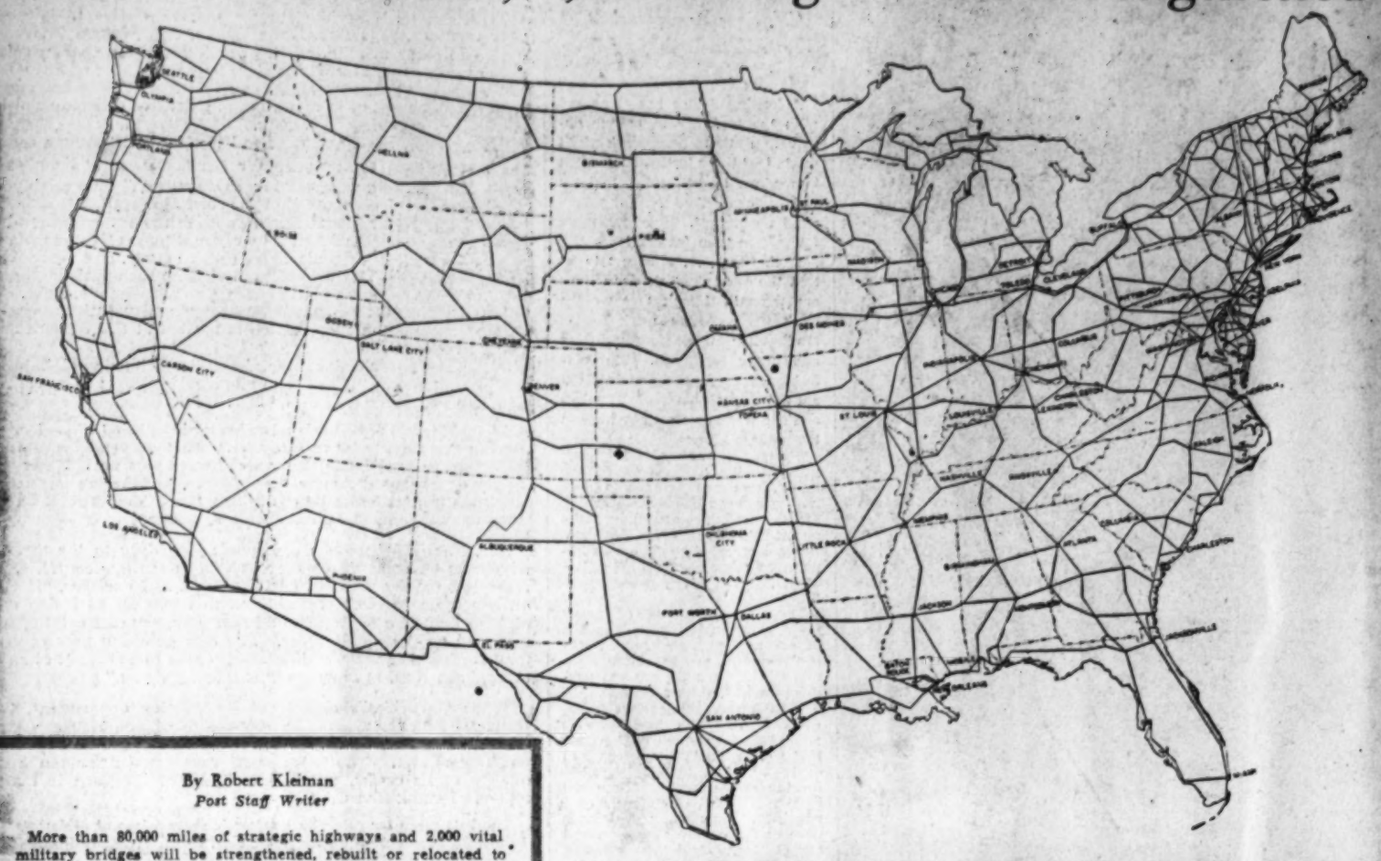
Heart of America's Defense

80,000 Miles of U. S. Highways Will Be Made to Equal Nazis' Auto Bahnen; 2,000 Bridges to Be Strengthened



By Robert Kleiman
Post Staff Writer

More than 80,000 miles of strategic highways and 2,000 vital military bridges will be strengthened, rebuilt or relocated to make America's road network "function as smoothly as that of Germany," The Post learned yesterday.

The Public Roads Administration and highway officials in 48 States are completing a survey of the vast maze of roads and bridges under specifications laid down by the War and Navy Departments and the National Defense Commission, P. R. A. officials revealed.

The disclosure followed a "premature" announcement Sunday by Gov. O'Conor of Maryland which outlined a huge road-building program for that State to meet defense needs. O'Conor estimated that the Maryland program alone would cost between $50,000,000 and $75,000,000.

Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody said yesterday that the inventory of highway needs is being made "at the request of President Roosevelt."

"In accordance with this request," he said, "particular attention will be paid to the strength of bridges, the width of strategic roads, adequacy of ingress to and egress from urban centers, and the servicing of existing and proposed Army, naval and air bases."

Carmody will report the results of the survey to the President in about three weeks, officials said, and it is expected that Congress will be asked for a substantial appropriation to defray the cost of the immense program.

"If our highway transportation system is to function as smoothly as that of Germany," Carmody said, more than 2,000 structurally-weak bridges must be strengthened and old roads must be "straightened, widened, grades reduced, grade crossings eliminated and obsolete structures replaced."

"Weak bridges," Carmody added, "are the most critical factor. On the average there is a weak bridge every 35 miles. Their present use involves risk to the users. A wartime use may invite disaster.

"Strengthening these weakest links cannot wait until the enemy is at hand. It is possible that advances in military science may make it necessary for our bridges to carry still heavier loads and increase the number to be strengthened or rebuilt."

Germany, it was pointed out, had 1,900 miles of four-lane, land-divided superhighways a year ago. The United States has several times as many similar roads, but these are cut up into short stretches near large cities all over the country. The coordinated, Nation-wide transportation system envisioned by the defense plan at present would necessitate the use of huge stretches of "horse and buggy" highways.

Not only the weights and dimensions of artillery caissons and heavy tanks are being considered in setting standards of road design for the defense program, Carmody said, but attention is being paid also to the movement of materials for production of military supplies.

Legislation authorizing appropriations of $327,000,000 for the Federal highway program for the fiscal years of 1942 and 1943 was approved unanimously by the Senate yesterday.

A major item was $200,000,000 for grants to States for construction of secondary roads.

Watergate Concert Held Despite Rain

Conductor Alex Bloch, Soloist Garfield Swift Are Given Applause

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Alexander Bloch conducted the National Symphony Orchestra last night at the Potomac Watergate, with Garfield Swift as soloist. Program: Overture to "Der Freischuetz" (Weber), Symphony No. 5 in E minor (Chaikovski), "Di Provenza il mar" from "La Traviata" (Verdi), "O vin, dissipe la tristesse" from "Hamlet" (Thomas), "Romeo and Juliet" (Chaikovski).

It was a small and damp audience that remained faithfully to the close of last evening's concert by the National Symphony Orchestra at the Potomac Watergate. Low-hanging clouds presaged rain at sunset, and all save the most devoted of the patrons stayed at home with a wisdom which the event justified. In place of the usual thousands, several hundred auditors were scattered over the expanse of chairs, and the wide steps descending to the terrace were almost empty. The majority of the listeners came provided with umbrellas or raincoats which were put to use before the first number on the program was over.

A light mist was already perceptible when Alexander Bloch advanced to the podium and received an applausive welcome on his first appearance in Washington. By the time that the overture to "Der Freischeutz" had proceeded half its length, the mist had thickened to rain, and the musicians in the front row were hitching their chairs back whenever they had an opportunity. After the overture, there were a few minutes of delay while the curtain was lowered three-quarters of the way down and the orchestra rearranged. During this pause most of the auditors retreated to the shelter of the underpasses at the Memorial Bridge, although a few hardy individuals kept their places.

The rain lessened to a drizzle during the performance of Chaikovski's fifth symphony and the auditors returned for the most part to their assigned places. For the sake of getting things over with a minimum of discomfort for all concerned, the entr'acte and ballet music from Schubert's "Rosamunde" was omitted, as was the intermission. That left two barytone solos by Garfield Swift, and Chaikowski's overture-fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet."

Alexander Bloch, whose regular post is with the Central Florida Orchestra, made a good impression under difficulties calculated to disconcert the most imperturbable conductor. He had a musicianly understanding to the scores he interpreted, and his readings were interesting in their meticulous phrasing and in the treatment of tonal color. He is a director economical with gestures, intense in his concentration and forcefully direct with his cues.

Garfield Swift, appearing before his townspeople with the National Symphony as his accompanist for the first time, was in excellent voice and disclosed dramatic verve in two operatic arias: "Di Provenza il mar," from "La Traviata," and "O vin, dissipe la tristessa," from Thomas' "Hamlet." His barytone has a vibrance and a clear intonation of pleasurable quality. He was warmly recalled, and responded with Chaikovski's "None But the Lonely Heart."

Water Filling Canal Again At Great Falls

Flooding Slows Up, However, as Workmen Find Leaks, Probably Made by Muskrats

For the first time in 16 years water flowed yesterday in the Great Falls section of the old C. & O. Canal. The National Capital Parks engineers had opened long-unused locks 20 and 15 and cautiously tested the dried canal bed for suspected leaks.

During the last two weeks, CCC enrollees and park engineers have been plugging holes in the 15-mile dry section of the canal between Chain Bridge and Great Falls. But more were found, probably made by muskrats, when water trickled down the upper 6-mile stretch.

Because water must be released slowly to make certain the dried canal walls will hold satisfactorily, the flooding process will take probably the whole of this week, according to Francis F. Gillen, acting superintendent of National Capital Parks.

Leaks discovered yesterday above lock 15 prevented the newly inundated section from being filled completely, Gillen said.

Canoes and rowboats will be permitted to use the canal from Georgetown to Seneca, Md., shortly after the 15-mile section is flooded this week, park officials said. Each of the locks will have to be portaged, however, as no funds are available to hire lock-keepers at the canal gates.

Motorboats and other larger craft will not be allowed to use the canal in the near future, Gillen said. Large-scale use by small-boat traffic will be facilitated soon by replacement of a foot bridge at the Old Anglers' Club with a higher structure 100 yards upstream, and extension of water connections at Great Falls, he added.

Only concern which is now equipped to furnish such boats to the public for use on the canal, it was reported, is the Welfare and Recreational Association of Public Buildings and Grounds, Inc., which now has several canoes and rowboats at Great Falls. Privately owned boats will be permitted to use canal facilities, however.

Capital News in Brief

95 Children Gain 453 Pounds at Camp

Ninety-five tubercular children will return from the Bald Eagle Hill Health Camp Friday 453 pounds heavier than they were when they left more than seven weeks ago.

Mrs. Margaret C. Marsh, superintendent of the camp, which is operated by the District Tuberculosis Association, announced yesterday that the average gain in weight per child was four pounds, eight ounces.

The largest gain was registered by 11-year-old Margaret Proctor, who picked up a pound for every year of her life. Dick Wormsley, 12, was second, with a gain of 9¼ pounds, and Betty Davis, 12, was third, with a gain of 9¼ pounds.

C. I. O. Forum to Talk D. C. Housing Tomorrow

The District's housing situation will be discussed at a forum at 8 p. m. tomorrow under sponsorship of the Washington Assembly of C. I. O. assemblies.

Speakers will include Sefton Darr, member of the Washington Housing Association, and Alexander Knowlton, member of the housing committee of the Washington Industrial Union Council. The meeting will be held at the United Mine Workers Building, 900 Fifteenth street northwest.

Rookie Policeman Seizes Safe-Breaker

In the act of prying open a grocery store safe, a 31-year-old colored man was captured early yesterday by a rookie policeman, W. B. Slack, of the Eighth Precinct.

As he patrolled his beat, Slack spotted the man inside a Sanitary store at 3226 Wisconsin avenue northwest. A confederate of the safe breaker escaped.

Army's Phone Line To Fort Myer Cut

The War Department's private telephone line to Fort Myer, Va., was put out of commission for an hour last week-end when somebody hacked open the cable near Fort Myer, an Army spokesman said yesterday.

Sabotage was not believed likely. Lead sheathing, for sale to junk dealers, was thought to have been the object of the act.

New Medical Unit Today Gallinger Hospital Opens

Veterinarians Will Convene Here Today

A collection of gas masks, American and foreign, is one of the highlights of the exhibition being held this week at the Mayflower Hotel, where 800 practitioners will gather today for the opening of the seventy-seventh annual convention of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

Major topic of the meeting will be discussion of methods for preventing animal diseases which might interfere with national defense.

Papers will be presented this afternoon on sleeping sickness among horses, canine rabies and control of Bang's disease in cattle.

The convention will get under way at 10 a. m. with an address of welcome by Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer. The program includes presentation of the Twelfth International Veterinary Congress Prize.

Erroneous Address Given in Knife Case

The address at 1011 Eleventh street northwest, reported in The Post yesterday as the residence of Grady V. Fowler, victim of a stabbing, was erroneous.

Fowler was stabbed Sunday, according to police, at an apartment house at Ninth street and New York avenue. At Emergency Hospital, where he was admitted physicians said his condition was not serious.

68 Traffic Law Violators Get 'Adjustments'

Congressman, Four Diplomatic Aides Among Those Let Off

A Congressman and four persons who pleaded diplomatic immunity were among 68 persons whose traffic tickets were adjusted last week, according to the latest issue of Maj. Brown's "Traffic Primer."

The list showed 54 warnings were given, while 14 tickets were canceled outright.

Representative Robert B. Chiperfield (Republican), of Illinois, was one of those let off with a warning. He was tagged for parking during the restricted hours of 4 to 6 p. m.

Warnings were also issued to the following, who pleaded diplomatic immunity: Arnette Prior, German Embassy; Tamenori Hara, Japanese Embassy; Joseph Barbecot, French Embassy, and Marie L. Stelter, of 1454 Rhode Island avenue northwest.

Others to escape fines included six who claimed their cars were pushed or disabled; four doctors who said they were answering emergency calls; four persons who argued they were on official business and five who said they were strangers in the city and unfamiliar with local regulations.

Joseph Meyers, 1483 Newton street northwest, was pardoned for parking double when he explained he was doing a good turn by helping an elderly woman to the door.

Two tickets from different officers for the same violation were issued to John H. Griffin, jr., of 28 Bates street northwest, charged with parking his truck in a restricted zone. He was let off with a warning when he explained that he was unloading goods.

Balanced District Budget Demanded

came out flatly against any increase in taxes.

"In our judgment, additional general fund revenues beyond those now provided cannot be secured without injury and hardship to District residents," Prettyman said.

He pointed out that, based on District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan's figures, the District would have a leeway of about $800,000 over and above expenses which the Commissioners could use to provide some of the requests. In speaking against any increase in taxes, Prettyman said, "It is becoming increasingly evident that more and more of our resources will be needed for the successful execution of the national preparedness program."

The Federation of Citizens Associations, represented by Harry S. Wender, made a strong plea for a balanced budget and was supported by L. A. Carruthers, former president of the federation. Wender said the budget for the National Zoological Park, now under the District, but controlled by the Smithsonian Institution, should be "placed where it belongs."

Wender favored a cancer control bureau, as recommended by Health officer George C. Ruhland; an eye specialist for the public schools, a new bridge or tunnel in line with South Capitol street, an expanded snow removal program, overpass at Fourteenth street and Maine avenue southwest, additional policemen, extension of the parking meters, the accident investigation squad, continuation of the traffic safety program, more men for the District pound, increase in Poundmaster Frank B. Marks' salary and a new fire boat capable of breaking ice.

New Teachers' College Asked

W. F. Wasson, speaking for the education committee of the federation, recommended construction of the new Wilson Teachers' College at the District-owned site at Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest. He also spoke in favor of additional elementary schools in the North Randle community and American University Park section. He said the federation was opposed to providing free tuition to children whose parents reside in other jurisdictions.

Ringgold Hart, of the Merchants & Manufacturers Association, expressed the opposition of his group for any budget which would be "beyond expected revenues based on the present tax schedule." He said he was not unmindful there may be worthy projects requested by the department heads, but his group was opposed to each and every one "unless revenues can be increased by some equitable system of taxation."

George A. Warren, Mid-City Citizens Association, favored Police Chief Brown's request for 100 additional men, chiefly "to fight street-walkers in our neighborhood." He also recommended the commissioners provide money to install two-way radios in the scout cars. The site at Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest should also be used for a new Abbott Vocational School, he said.

The Keystone Automobile Club, represented by its manager, George Keneipp, recommended an underpass at Dupont Circle in line with Connecticut avenue and indorsed Director of Highway H. C. Whitehurst's request for $250,000 to begin construction on the Fourteenth street and Maine avenue underpass.

Rufus S. Lusk, Washington Taxpayers Association, asked the Commissioners not to submit a budget to Congress calling for a raise in the present $1.75 real estate tax. He said the present one-year residence requirement for eligibility on relief rolls or for hospitalization in municipal hospitals, be raised to three years. When asked by Maj. Donovan, auditor, whether the $300,000 increase for general relief be approved, Lusk said "in these prosperous times men who are employable should be able to get jobs."

Washington I. Cleveland, of the American Automobile Association, favored: Increase in police personnel; provision for off-street parking; traffic safety lighting for streets to afford better visibility; grade separations at traffic bottlenecks; limit number of taxis, and establish a separate Traffic Court.

Dorsey W. Hyde, representing the Family Welfare Division of the Council of Social Agencies favored relief for unemployed employables; additional case workers for public assistance division to reduce the "heavy" case load; the food stamp plan; a centralized bureau where persons seeking aid could go without "being shunted from one place to another."

Miss Mildred Terrett, of the Citizens Coordinating Committee, made a strong plea for a housekeepers project under the Board of Public Welfare. This service would be offered families where mothers have work but cannot leave the house because of young children; or the father with a job must take care of a sick wife and small children. She also recommended funds for a new Receiving Home.

Other Requests Asked

Adelbert W. Lee, Randle Highlands Citizens Association, recommended a new branch library for Anacostia; a new police precinct at Forty-second street and Benning road northeast; more policemen, better fire protection for Randle Highlands; better water and sewer facilities for that section and additional inspectors for the Department of Inspection.

President Expected To Attend Airport Ceremonies

President Roosevelt is expected to attend ceremonies at the laying of a cornerstone at the Gravelly Point Airport administration building next month, Robert H. Hinckley, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said yesterday.

The new airport at Gravelly Point, he said, probably will be opened on December 17, the thirty-seventh anniversary of the first flight by the Wright brothers at Kitty Hawk, N. C.

Rep. G. W. Seger, Of N. J., Dies at 74; House Adjourns

The House adjourned yesterday out of respect to one of its veteran members, Representative George W. Seger (Republican), of New Jersey, who died earlier in the day of a heart ailment at Naval Hospital.

Dean of the New Jersey delegation, Seger was 74 and had served 16 years in Congress. He was the twenty-seventh member of the present Congress to die in office.

Speaker Bankhead, who expressed regret at the loss, appointed a House committee to attend the funeral today at Passaic, N. J. It comprises New Jersey Representatives Eaton, Wolverton and Hartley, all Republicans, and Norton, Democrat.

A native of New York City, Representative Seger entered politics after spending his earlier years as a cabinet maker. He was Mayor of Passaic from 1911 to 1919 and director of that city's finance department from 1919 to 1923, when he was elected to the Sixty-eighth Congress.

While in Washington Seger made his home at the Dodge Hotel. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Fred Dominick, wife of a former South Carolina Representative, and two sons, Reginald and George Seger, both of Passaic.

Gen. Cox Denies Insubordination At War Maneuvers

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard at recent war maneuvers in northern New York State, last night termed as "unfounded and untrue" charges that privates refused to obey their officers at the war games. The charges were contained in a letter made public last night and allegedly written home by a National Guardsman to his mother from the maneuvers.

It was charged that Battery A of the searchlight crew went on a sit-down strike.

"I was in very close touch with that section throughout the maneuvers, and never saw or heard of any such action," said Gen. Cox.

The letter stated that "at least three-fourths of the outfit had ptomaine" because of badly cooked food. This was also denied by Gen. Cox.

He emphasized that there were no cases to his knowledge where privates had "sassed" their officers as was charged in the letter.

President of Citizens' Group Will Wed Secretary Thursday

Romance has blossomed in the Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association, it was disclosed yesterday, and the president and secretary will be married Thursday.

John P. Cahill, the president, and Mary Betty Durkin, the secretary, will exchange vows at 10 a. m. at St. Ann's Catholic Church, 4402 Wisconsin avenue northwest.

Students together at St. Anthony's School, their romance began about four years ago after their graduation. Cahill appointed her as secretary of the citizens association last October.

"She is so efficient," he explained, "and easy to work with."

Cahill, a War Department employe and former newspaper photographer, has been president of the association for four terms. Miss Durkin is the daughter of Sergt. Ambrose Durkin, chief of the record bureau of the Police Department. Cahill lives at 2636 Tenth street northeast. Her home is 4208 Chesapeake street northwest.

Feller Halts Nats in Relief, Tribe Wins, 4-3

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Any little thing that Mr. Clark Griffith can contribute to the discomfort of the Cleveland Indians would make him very happy, and one of the reasons is that the Cleveland club recently deprived him of $20,000—in cash.

POVICH

The cash belonged to Mr. Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Tigers, and it was to be paid to Mr. Griffith in a deal for Buddy Myer, which the Cleveland club blocked, although not entirely on account of meanness.

The Tigers wanted Myer, and that was their offer for him—20 grand. They anticipated the collapse of Charley Gehringer, and thus they made Griffith an offer that he could scarcely refuse for his 35-year-old veteran second baseman. The Tigers were in the thick of the pennant fight, in fact they were leading the league, and with Gehringer injured they wanted Myer, and badly.

They saw that he was playing good ball, and their own infield was bogging down. Gehringer was hurt, Shortstop Dick Bartell was operating on creaking legs and Third Baseman Frankie Higgins was playing the bag on the silver standard—that is, on a dime. Money never has been any object to Mr. Briggs when he wanted a ball player. He was the fellow who offered the Nats $150,000 for Dutch Leonard before the trading deadline on June 15. The $20,000 offer for Myer was a mere drip from the coffers of the Detroit automobile body magnate.

The reason the Tigers didn't acquire Myer was because there were certain baseball regulations to be observed. They couldn't buy Myer outright, because the dealing deadline of June 15 had expired. They had to acquire the veteran second baseman by the waiver route.

So the Nats asked waivers on Myer, and that's where the Cleveland club entered the picture. The Indians' bosses knew that the Tigers could bolster their infield with Myer, and they wanted no strengthening of the Tigers' infield inasmuch as the Tigers at the time were the team to beat for the pennant.

It simply happened that at the time Myer's name appeared on the waiver lists, the Indians were in second place and the Tigers in first, and thus the Cleveland club had prior claim to Myer. They didn't want Myer—they had a brilliant second baseman in Ray Mack—but they didn't want the Detroit club to get Myer. So to forestall that deal, the Indians claimed him.

But the Indians were claiming him at the $7,500 waiver price, and Clark Griffith would not sell him at that figure, particularly inasmuch as he knew the Tigers were prepared to pay 20 grand for the player. But with the Indians claiming him, that deal was off, and Griffith withdrew Myer from the waiver lists, swallowing his disappointment and the loss of $20,000.

A week later, Cleveland was leading the league and the Tigers were in second place. Griffith could again ask waivers on Myer, and this time the Detroit club would have first claim by reason of being lower in the standings. Ordinarily, there would be an understanding that if Griffith asked waivers on Myer and the Tigers claimed him, the Detroit club would pay him $12,500 over and above the waiver price, but a new major league rule enacted last year precluded that sort of a deal.

Judge Landis last year made a new ruling that the second time a player is put on the waiver list he must be disposed of if he is claimed—but at the $7,500 waiver price. Both the Nats and the Detroit management were afraid to trifle with that rule. Particularly was General Manager Jack Zellers, of the Tigers, scared to resume dealing for Myer at more than the waiver price. When Judge Landis had Mr. Zellers on the carpet last winter in connection with the free ageney of 96 Detroit players, he told Mr. Zellers at the time that he would be kicked out of baseball for one more infraction of the rules of the game.

So the Detroit negotiations for Myer are off, and the desire of the Cleveland club to keep Myer from the Tigers has cost Griffith 20 grand. Small wonder then that the Nats' boss is not fond of the Cleveland team. It may be more than a coincident that for the current series between the Nats and the Indians, the Washington club managed to reserve its three top pitchers—Hudson, Leonard and Chase—for duty against the league leaders.

For Myer, it is a tough sort of break. Save for the Indians he would now be a member of the Detroit team which is runner-up in the pennant race and still holds a glowing chance to take it all. That would have meant a $5,000 check for Myer in the world series, and another heavy contract for next year. He would have helped them to win that pennant.

Myer's play for the Nats during the past two months has been something of a revelation. A year ago, even two years ago, he appeared washed up as a big leaguer, but this season he has bounced back miraculously, is hitting over .300, is fielding brilliantly and is the same dangerous hitter he always has been in the clutch. If he were the vindictive sort, he could share Griffith's bitterness toward the Indians.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 26.—In case you give a hang, here is the basis of the argument between Max Baer and Mike Jacobs. Baer believes that he is the only drawing card left for Louis to fight. Believes, in fact, that he is such a drawing card that he should be given a $50,000 guarantee, just to appear. Mike argues, "if he's such a whale of a drawing card he should take the percentage I'm offering him. He'll make more money that way, if he can draw like he says he can."

CONSIDINE

The Baer man remains one of the mysteries of the ring. He is right when he says that he is the only fellow who could draw a lot of money with Louis. He is sensible enough to realize that he couldn't draw it in New York—which still remembers the first Louis-Baer fight—but on the coast or in Detroit or Chicago the match might go as high as a quarter of a million dollars. That's the ceiling now. We know responsible boxing authorities who doubt if a Louis-Conn fight would gross $100,000 if put on today. They feel that Conn has not convinced any large number of persons that he is good enough to fight heavies.

And yet here is Baer, still laughed at or snarled at in many quarters for his first fight against Louis.. Perhaps it is the color he packs. Or his awe-inspiring physique. No man can talk a better fight, particularly when he works up a mad against the opponent. As well as we know what would happen in another Louis-Baer fight, Max could impress us with his threats beforehand, and steam the fight into the big money class.

Baer's flirtations with Jack Kearns and the so-called Jersey syndicate which is negotiating for a Baer-Pat Comisky fight in Jersey City next month are just that. He still thinks Jacobs can be egged into giving him what he wants to fight Louis again, and that the match might still be made, as late as it is.

A crusader who calls himself "Crimson Lancer" has bombarded sports desks with a flaming impeachment of the suggestion by New England racing men that worn-out race horses be bought up and either turned out to pasture or destroyed.

"The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals holds that, subject to the advice of a competent veterinarian, a domesticated animal has the right to life," Mr. Lancer writes. "If the racing associations don't want broken down and worn out horses in races why do they stage so many races which attract these very horses? Why have the racing associations fostered and promoted the claiming race?

"If our racing associations will stage races for good horses, the broken down and worn out horses will not show up at the tracks for the simple reason that the races they could win would be so scarce that no owner would be foolish enough to keep a broken down and worn out horse in training.

"Today the great majority of our bad horses live off the claiming races. Every day we permit $1,000 horses to run for $1,000 purses, but don't stage daily purses of $2,000 for $2,000 horses, daily $5,000 purses for $5,000 horses, daily $100,000 purses for $100,000 horses. Thus, on the basis of their actual worth, our racing associations offer more money to the cheaper horses than the good ones. Then they wonder why (and bemoan the fact that) our tracks are cluttered with bad-legged racers."

Lancer's suggested remedy: No purse for a claiming race shall exceed one-half the value of any horse entered. Cut down on claiming races. Examine horses in the paddock and put them on the mercifully ineligible list if found unsound.

We have in our possession a letter from a close friend of Ted Williams which explains the mental turmoil that has led the fabulous rookie of the Boston Red Sox to become a problem child. We are turning it over to Joe Cronin, but in doing so we would like to appeal to Williams' hecklers and irate sportswriters to give the kid a well-deserved break. He is laboring under such a strain, because of home conditions of a personal nature, that it is a wonder he is playing as well as he is. And a wonder that he hasn't taken a bat to some of his defamers.

We're turning the data over to Joe Cronin with the recommendation that he try once more to become what the semi-homeless Williams needs more than anything else—a fatherly friend.

Mid-Atlantic Pros Led by Worsham 76

United Press Staff Correspondent.

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 26.—The rains and Dick Metz lashed the Hershey Country Club course today in the first qualifying round of the twenty-third championship of the Professional Golfers Association, and Metz came out on top.

The handsome 31-year-old player from Oak Park, Ill., slushed over the 7,017-yard layout in 69 strokes, 4 under par, to set the pace for 119 of his brother professionals.

Metz, a semifinalist last year against Defending Champion Henry Picard, cracked out a par 36 on the first nine and walloped four strokes off the back nine to lead a spectacular assault on par. A total of 16 players bettered par and 5 of them equaled it, despite the cold, rainy weeather.

Pins In Center

The reason for the low scores was that the pins were placed in the middle of the big greens and the boys could hammer away for the cup, knowing their shots would drop dead on the boggy turf.

A four-man delegation from the Middle Atlantic section, composed of two Washington, D. C., and two Virginia professionals, were among the higher scores, with Lewis Worsham's 37, 39—76 best.

Worsham, the 22-year-old Burning Tree professional, was out in one over par 37, with two bogeys, a birdie and six pars and back in 39, with seven pars and two one-overs. He will probably need better than 76 tomorrow to make the match play rounds.

Larkin Has 80

Gene Larkin, of the Woodmont Club just outside Washington, ran into a double-bogey six on the first hole and could never get going, finishing with 41-39—80.

The two Virginia pros finished with like totals from the same nines, Bobby Cruickshank, of the Country Club of Virginia, and Errie Ball, Charlottesville, 40-38—78 each.

Benny Loving, a former Washington pro, now employed in Massachusetts, was also 78 from nines of 38 and 40.

At 71 were Johnny Kinder, Paul

Cardinal Hurler Charged With Balk On Unusual Play

St. Louis, Aug. 26 (AP).—Can a pitcher be charged with a balk without the ball? Yes.

Off-hand, it might seem impossible. But Clyde Shoun, of the Cardinals, drew such a penalty Sunday against the Boston Bees.

Carvel Rowell, Boston second baseman, was on first after an infield single. Having in mind the hidden-ball trick, Jimmy Brown, Cardinal shortstop, concealed the ball waiting for a chance to pick the runner off if he strayed too far away from the bag. But Shoun made the mistake of taking his position on the mound and Umpire Larry Goetz called the balk.

The rule book says a balk shall be called on a pitcher "regardless of whether he makes any motion to pitch or not, if he takes a legal position on the pitcher's plate without the ball in his possession."

Indians' Ace Hurls Last 3 Frames

Bobby Summoned to Aid Harder in 7th; Tribe Boosts Lead; Trosky, Travis Homer

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

At the frantic behest of Manager Oscar Vitt, Bob Feller made an unadvertised appearance at Griffith Stadium late yesterday afternoon, halted the melting process of a Cleveland lead and delivered a 4-3 victory to the Indians.

The harassed Vitt, fighting off revolt on his own team and attempting to avert a fifth successive defeat for his league leaders, turned appealingly to the Great Nonesuch of his pitching staff in the seventh inning. Mel Harder was faltering and the Nats had the tieing run on second base, with one out, when Feller heard the call.

He strode to the mound to quell that seventh-inning uprising and hold the Nats hitless for the remainder of the game. But it was no breeze for Feller, who created some ninth-inning panic in the Cleveland dugout when he filled the bases by walking three Nats.

Three pinch hitters went to the plate for the Nats in that ninth, and after Sammy West struck out, Buddy Myer drew a walk from Feller. Rick Ferrell popped up, but Feller was still groping for his control and walked Pinch Hitter Jake Early. Then he walked George Case to load the bases, laying the issue in the lap of Buddy Lewis.

Four times Lewis fouled off Feller pitches before he sealed the Indians' triumph by raising a soft fly to Rightfielder Ben Chapman.

Indians Hike Lead

It was a painful defeat for the Nats and Dutch Leonard, who held the Indians to seven hits while the Nats were banging Mel Harder for eight. The Injun who was particularly in the hair of Leonard was big Hal Trosky who knocked him loose from three runs with a first-inning homer and a third-inning single.

It was after Harder walked Rick Ferrell in the seventh and Leonard sacrificed to put the tying run on second, with one out that Feller got the call after a couple of balks by Vitt in the direction of the bull pen.

He disposed of George Case on one pitch—a pop-up to Keltner—and he rid himself of Buddy Lewis on a grounder to Mack. The Nats couldn't get to first base in the eighth, and you know what happened in the ninth.

Their triumph increased the Indians' lead to three games over the rained-out Tigers, and to six games over the equally idle third-place Yankees.

Trosky set the Indians up in a 2-0 lead in the first inning after Ben Chapman opened the game with a single to center and was forced at second by Weatherly. With two out, Big Hal lifted his

Hub in Relief Again, Giants Rout Cubs, 10-5

'Meal Ticket' Blanks Foe Last 5 Innings For 11th Triumph

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 26.—Making his second relief appearance in three days, old Carl Hubbell helped the New York Giants crush the Chicago Cubs 10 to 5 today and strengthen their hold on fourth place in the National League.

The Giants got their 16 hits in clusters and gave Harry Gumbert an 8 to 1 lead in the first four frames, scoring five times in the fourth, but then the Cubs came right back with four tallies and "Hub" hurried to the rescue. He shutout Chicago in the last five innings and was credited with his eleventh victory against seven setbacks.

The Giants bunched three singles for a run in the second, four hits for two runs in the third, four hits for five tallies in the fourth and three hits for two runs in the sixth.

Young Vern Olsen bore the brunt of the Giants' assault before giving

Sylvester Johnson, Nearing 40, Hurls 3-Hit Ball for Philly in Second Game After Walters Hurls, Bats Way to 18th Victory

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 26.—Sylvester Johnson will be 40 years old come December, but he hurled three-hit ball today to give cellar-dwelling Philadelphia a 6-1 victory over Cincinnati after Bucky Walters pitched and batted his champion Reds to a 3-2 win in the opener.

The first game was the third in two days and twenty-seventh of the year that the Rhinelanders gained by a one-run margin. It likewise found Johnny Rizzo, former Red, clouting his third homer of the series for the Phils.

But it was Walters all the way. With his first circuit smash of the year and a single, he accounted for two of the Redleg tallies.

Wins Eighteenth

In chalking up his eighteenth victory of the season, the lean-flanked right-hander struck out three, walked two and was hit in only three frames.

In the fourth, the Phils bunched three singles—by Merrill May, Herman Schulte and Johnny Rizzo—for their intial scoring; Rizzo's twenty-second homer came in the seventh and the Phils' final safety went for naught in the ninth.

The Reds, meantime, got the

Ripple Ordered To Report to Reds

Pittsburgh, Aug. 26 (AP).—Leslie O'Connor, secretary to baseball's Commissioner Kensaw Mountain Landis, said Landis today telegraphed Outfielder Jimmy Ripple, instructing him to report immediately to the Cincinnati Reds.

Ripple, former Dodger, was obtained by the Reds from Montreal a week ago, but has not yet put in his appearance at Cincinnati. Landis' telegram, O'Connor said, was sent to Montreal "where we believe Ripple is."

Landis came here for a hearing in a minor league case.

Manager Drives In 3 Runs; Jim Bagby Good in Relief

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 26.—The Boston Red Sox overcame a three-run deficit today to defeat the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 6, with Manager Joe Cronin's hitting and Jim Bagby's relief pitching dominating the Boston play.

Cronin collected a double and single in three official trips to the plate and drove in three of his team's seven runs. Bagby, called from the bullpen to relieve young Earl Johnson in the third inning, gave up just two hits for the rest of the distance.

The Browns threw a scare into the Sox in the ninth inning, pushing over two runs and getting the tying and possibly the winning tallies on base before Walt Judnich filed to Doc Cramer in deep right to end the game.

With one away, Bob Swift drew a base on balls, Alan Strange batted for Pitcher Bill Trotter and belted a double-play ball back to Bagby. The Sox hurler threw wide to Bobby Doerr at second and both runners were safe. Myril Hoag, batting for Don Heffner, flied to Williams and then both runners advanced on Bagby's wild pitch. Cronin erred on a harsh grounder by Chet Laabs, Swift scoring on the play. Rip Radcliff's rightfield single scored Strange before Judnich ended the game with his long fly.

N.J. Track Granted Mutuels License

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 26 (AP).—The New Jersey racing commission announced today the granting of its first license for horse racing with pari-mutuel betting to the Monmouth Park Racing Association.

Subject to the Security Exchange Commission's approval of its financing—a restricted $1,500,000 stock issue—the association will conduct races June 23 to August 2, 1941, at Oceanport. The site is that of Elkwood Park, famous racing center in the gay '90's. It went out of business when gambling was made unconstitutional. The ban was lifted last year.

Godoy's Manager Makes Offer to Baer

Philadelphia, Aug. 26 (U.P.).—Promoter Herman Taylor tonight wired Ancil Hoffman, manager of Max Baer, an offer of $20,000 or 30 per cent of the net for his fighter to meet Arturo Godoy, South American heavyweight, in a late October bout here.

Taylor announced after a conference with Godoy's manager, Al Weill, that the South American was satisfied with his terms for the bout, which probably would be held at Convention Hall.

6 National Amateur Berths at Stake in Qualifying Here

Billy Shea Posts Best Trial Score

Ralph Bogart's 73 Is Second Lowest Practice Round Over Chevy Chase Course

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Big hitters are big favorites in the sectional qualifying rounds for the National Amateur Championship today at Chevy Chase as the 6,607-yard par 69 layout is playing the longest in history, according to the boys who tested it in practice rounds yesterday.

The combination of the Sunday night and Monday morning rain and lack of sunshine, and the fact that the course has been watered from tee to green all summer, will make the players work for every shot today, and possibly press a little trying to get home in two on the long par four holes.

Three-fourths of the field of 38, that will battle 36 holes for six places, played and practiced yesterday and the best trial spin was a three over par 72 by Billy Shea, who went to the second round of the national championship three years ago.

Bogart Reports 73

District Amateur Champion Ralph Bogart, the young Wilson High School student, holed every putt and reported a 73, lowest by six shots in a foursome that included three promising youngsters from the 11-man Baltimore contingent, Eddie Johnston, Otto Greiner, who won the qualifying medal last year at Five Farms, and Nathan Kaufman, jr.

Volney Burnett, winner of the Chevy Chase Invitation last spring; Jimmy Watts, one of the two Virginia delegates from Lynchburg, Va., and M. Parker Nolan, the Maryland amateur champion, were all 74, and the players were figuring last night that two 74s will be plenty good today.

Dick Watson's greens force will be out at 5 o'clock this morning to cut the greens while Golf Committee Chairman Robert Stead, jr., promised the pins would be placed in fair places.

Rules Concessions

Due to the soggy condition of the turf, Stead and Maryland State Golf Association vice president, Dr. Robert A. Keilty, ruled that the players may wipe their balls on the green and a buried ball may be dropped, without penalty, in the fairway or rough.

Out of bounds will be stroke and distance, meaning that every ball off the course will carry a two-stroke penalty. However, the out of bounds penalty was lifted on the ninth hole, a long par three that will require a full drive to get home. The committeeman also ruled the track between the thirteenth green and the seventeenth tee will not be a hazard.

Bobby Brownell, the District's only qualifier last year who qualified and won one match at Chicago, will try to go 36 holes for the first time since he suffered a broken leg last spring and he rested all day yesterday in anticipation of the long grind.

Roger Peacock, the city's outstanding amateur golfer, forsook company and played by himself, meaning that Peacock will be really trying today.

The only unknown player in the field is William McIntyre, of the Pasadena Club in St. Petersburg, Fla., who will be in the capacity of a "floater." Dick Lunn, a member of Chevy Chase, who has been living in New York for two years, is in town on a combination business and pleasure trip this month and will try his luck with the D. C. and Maryland players.

The United States Golf Association will award a medal to the low qualifier, and anything around the 73-72, 145 mark is expected to lead the half dozen players who make the grade to Winged Foot.

The first twosome, of Pat Martino, Capital, and Richard Lunn, will play at 9 in the morning and 1 in the afternoon. The last starting time is 10:48 and 2:48 for George Ferris and C. Henry Cohen. A play off, if any, will follow the posting of the last score, and will be a "quick-death" affair.

Barney Welsh To Play First Match Today

Top-seeded Barney Welsh is scheduled to make his debut in the D. C. Recreation Tennis Tournament today at Reservoir Courts after rain yesterday postponed all matches. Yesterday's schedule will prevail today in its entirety.

Welsh who recently reclaimed much of his local prestige by winning the District championship for the ninth consecutive season will play George Lee in a first-round match at 5 p. m.

Also slated for first-time action are C. Alphonso Smith, defending champion, who engages Ricky Willis in what should be one of the best played matches of the day, and DeWitt Smith, another formidable contender.

Houghton and Balestri Win at Winchester

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winchester, Va., Aug. 26.—Playing over a mist-shrouded, nine-hole course here today, Ralph Beach, pro at Suburban Club, near Baltimore, repeated his 1938 success by winning first in the pro-sweeps and tying for second in the pro-amateur to take top money in one of the series of summer tournaments staged by the Mid-Atlantic P. G. A.

Beach shot par golf of 71 for low score in the pro-sweeps, and with Lawrence Wisner, also of Baltimore, as his partner, posted a best ball score of 69.

The pro-amateur was won by Al Houghton, Beaver Dam pro, playing with Joe Balestri, who posted between them a best-ball score of 66, five under par. Houghton and another amateur from Washington, Jesse Baggett, tied for second with a 69.

In winning first in the pro-sweeps, Beach had little difficulty going out, posting a sub-par 34 with birdies on holes No. 2 and No. 8. It was coming in that he ran into trouble on hole 13, where he took a one-over-par five, and hole 18, where he missed a 2-foot putt, for another one-over-par five. This ran his score for the nine up to 37, two over par, and making his total a par 71.

Houghton was one over par going out with a five on par-four hole No. 7, and came in with an even par 3 for a one-over-par of 72.

But Coffey, diminutive local pro, was off his putting and could only scrape together a 37 and 36 for a total of 73, after turning in a 68 card in a practice round in the morning. Coffey, George Diffenbaugh and Frank Invernizzi tied for first in the pro-sweeps here last year at two-over-par 72. The course has been lengthened since then and par cut one stroke.

Diffenbaugh turned in a 76 today and Invernizzi wasn't entered.

All scores in the pro-sweeps and the top four in the pro-amateur are listed below:

PRO SWEEPS

PRO-AMATEUR

Houghton and Joe Balestri (Washington), 32, 34—66; Houghton and Jesse Bazgett (Washington), 36, 38—69; Beach and Lawrence Wisner (Baltimore), 33, 36—69; Coffey and Carl Campbell (Winchester), 34, 36—70.

Johnson issued only one pass and fanned five. The Reds' lone run was manufactured on their only extra base blow—a triple by Bill Baker in the second—and an outfield fly.

'Skins to Cut Six After Next Game

Farrar, Kiss Held Likely to Leave After Exhibition On Labor Day

A Staff Correspondent

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 25.—Coach Ray Flaherty announced today that six men will be cut from the Redskins squad Thursday when the club packs up to leave for its exhibition game with the Green Bay Packers Labor Day afternoon in Milwaukee.

The Redskin coach had been undecided as to how many men from the squad of 44 now in camp he would strike from the roster, but after this morning's workout said half a dozen will get the ax. The playing roster has to be cut down to 33 men by September 15, when the Skins open the regular season against the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Although he refused to say just who would go the rookie contingent is expected to provide the material for this first cut.

Because of a back injury which may end his professional football playing days forever, Vince Farrar, halfback purchased from Pittsburgh, is certain to go. Others expected to get the ax are Frank Kiss, center; Chuck Slagle, North Carolina guard; John Thomassin, tackle from U. S. C., Sandy Sanford and Gene Blackwell, ends from Alabama, may be cut and sent to the Wilmington, Del., farm for seasoning.

Jimmie Johnston and Maxie Krause, veteran fullbacks, were ordered to the showers early today and may not see action in Wednesday night's exhibition at Gonzaga Stadium. Johnson's shoulder and Krause's back, both injured in Seattle, have shown little progress.

To make up for the absence of these two, both on Assistant Coach Turk Edwards' West team, Flaherty today had Ray Hare, right halfback from Gonzaga, running in the tailback position. Hare, however, has yet to learn the signals from that position, and another rookie, Bob Seymour, is expected to see most of the action. Otherwise, the lineups will be the same as in Seattle when Bo Russell's 45-yard field goal gave Flaherty's East team a 17-14 victory over the West.

U.S.G.A. Bars Ferrier From Nat'l Tourney

Australian Champion Notified; Ineligible Because of Writings In Book, Magazines

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 26.—Jim Ferrier, Australian amateur and open golf champion, revealed tonight that the United States Golf Association had ruled him ineligible to compete in the National Amateur tournament next month.

Ferrier said the association notified him today that its action in barring him was a result of his newspaper and magazine connections in Australia.

The 6-foot-4, 195-pound star was scheduled to compete here tomorrow in the qualifying round, but Chicago district officials were notified simultaneously that Ferrier should not be allowed to play.

Was Strong Entry

Ferrier was considered an outstanding contender for the amateur championship, which starts September 9 at the Winged Foot Club, Mamaroneck, N. Y. He was the second low amateur in the U. S. Open this year and low amateur in the Chicago open, St. Paul Open and Milwaukee Open.

He was amazed at the ruling, pointing out that his amateur status had been certified in the past by the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews, ruling golf body in England, and the Australian Golf Union, counterpart of the U. S. G. A. in that country.

The U. S. G. A. announcement at New York said the ruling was based on the Australian's book, "Jim Ferrier's Golf Shots," published under a royalty contract.

Ferrier's Defense

Ferrier said his writings "definitely are not of an instructional nature," adding:

"I do not attempt in this book to tell other golfers how to play. I simply analyze my own style, which creates comment wherever I go because it is so unorthodox.

"The U. S. G. A. let me play in the Open as an amateur and gave me a medal for finishing second. Three weeks ago I entered the amateur and received a letter of thanks and a receipt. I haven't done anything since then to affect my amateur status.

"Can't Understand It"

"But only last Saturday I got a letter from Edward L. Cheyney, of the amateur status and conduct commitee of the U. S. G. A., informing me I was ineligible.

"I can't understand it. What are they trying to do to me. I came 11,000 miles to play in the amateur and have been in this country since March, yet they inform me three days before the qualifying test of the tourney that I have been disqualified."

U. S G. A. Explains Disqualification

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 26.—The United States Golf Association was forced to decline the entry of Jim Ferrier, Australian Open and Amateur champion, for the 1940 National Amateur championship because of the publication of an instructional book from which he received royalties, U. S. G. A. officials said tonight.

The book, published in Australia, consists primarily of photographs of Ferrier making various golf strokes, supplemented by written matter of instructional nature. It is called "Jim Ferrier's Golf Shots."

"Mr. Ferrier has stated to the association that he has a contract to receive royalties from the sale of the book. The association therefore regretfully decided that Mr. Ferrier is not eligible to compete for the amateur championship," the U. S. G. A. statement concluded.

Durocher Takes Blame for Slump Of Joe Medwick

Pittsburgh, Aug. 26 (AP).—Manager Leo Durocher of the Brooklyn Dodgers says he's to blame for the batting slump of his pal, Joe Medwick.

Featherweight Champ Wins Title Bout In New Orleans

By the United Press

New Orleans, Aug. 26.—Petey Scalzo, of New York, world featherweight boxing champion, tonight won a ten-round nontitle bout decision over Jimmy Perrin, of New Orleans.

Perrin is Louisiana featherweight titleholder.

Scalzo was credited with winning all rounds but the ninth on the official score card. Neither fighter drew blood. Perrin's fighting was defensive almost throughout.

Scalzo weighed 127¾ pounds, Perrin, 126¾.

Judges were Walter Rogers and Jimmy Lascola. Referee was Red Dolan. All are of New Orleans.

Bing Crosby, Vines Among 750 Players

28 Cities Are Host To Simon-Pures Today; 10 Ex-Champs Among Exemptions

By the United Press

Nearly 750 golfers, who have at least $5 worth of confidence in their game, play 36 holes today in hopes of qualifying for the National Amateur Championship to be played at Winger Foot Golf Club, Mamaroneck, N. Y., September 9-14.

On 28 links between Boston and Los Angeles, and Tampa and Seattle, the simon pures who risked the $5 entry fee will attempt to be among the 140 qualifiers who will join ten former champions in the forty-fourth playing of the Amateur.

The starting field for the championship was trimmed to 150 from 170 this year, but that was in keeping with the entry list which was the smallest since 1937 when the Amateur was played in Portland, Oreg. The field was more than 300 under the 1,118 who entered in 1938 at Garden City, last time it was played in the New York district.

Hal Sims Entered

The odds are against it, but there is a possibility that the 1940 champion may be a crooner, a movie star, a former world tennis champion or a sports writer, because among the entries are Bing Crosby, Randolph Scott, Ellsworth Vines and Vernon Tietjen, baseball writer for the St. Louis Star-Times. Other prominents, whose efforts will be watched, included Dan Topping, owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers football team and bridge expert P. Hal Sims.

Defending Champion Marvin (Bud) Ward headed the list of exempted players, which included former title holders Francis D. Ouimet, Charles Evans, jr., Jesse Guilford, Jess Sweetser, Max Marston, George Dunlap, Johnny Fischer, Johnny Goodman and Willie Turnesa.

Publinx Stars Invited

Prominent golfing names shooting to qualify include two former British amateur champs, Charley Yates and Bob Sweeney. Others are Jack Munger, Reynolds Smith, Frank Strafaci, T. Suffern Tailer, Ray Billows, Dick Chapman, Don Schumacher, Johnny Burke, Scotty Campbell, Walter Emery, Bill Holt, Tommy Sheehan, Fred Haas, Wilford Wehrle, Art Doering, Gus Moreland and Ed Kingsley.

For the first time in years, the U. S. G. A. invited the four semifinalists of the public championships to try to qualify. Two accepted. Bob Clark, of St. Paul, 1940 winner, and Ed Furgol, of Detroit, sent in their entry fees.

Greyhound Ends Fine Career With Win at Syracuse

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 26 (AP).—Greyhound, champion trotter, finished his grand circuit comeback campaign today with a two out of three heat victory in the $1,733 Trotting Club trot at the Syracuse Fair grounds.

Greyhound, winner in straight heats in five previous starts, lost his first heat of the year in the opening of today's event, when Peter Astra caught him at the wire.

In the next two heats, however, the great trotter first beat out Peter Astra by a half length, and then won by as much from Bravo, with Peter Astra sixth and last.

Dellicurti Is Winner

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—Vic Dellicurti, 149¼, of New York, outslugged Augie Arellano, 152¼, of Houston, Tex., to win an eight-round decision before 5,000 fans at the Coliseum tonight.

Victory Light Likes Marlboro Mud, Rallies to Win Feature

Kissin Kid Defeated by Hard Drive

Favorite Dohoev Third as 6,000 Wager $93,000; Double Pays $18.30

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 26.—Victory Light, whose sire, Victorian, won the Preakness in the mud, found today's soggy track to his liking and splashed away with the feature race, the Chesapeake Beach Purse. The 5-year-old gelding came from last position under a good ride by Jockey Douglas West to finish a length in front of his nearest opponent. Kissin Kid, also a son of a mud-loving sire, Osculator, was second, a length behind the winner, a neck in advance of Dohoev, the public choice.

Victory Light's recent races had been poor and the crowd of 6,000, smallest of the meeting, overlooked him for the most part and he paid a $68.50 mutuel. Despite the rather small crowd, betting continued at a good pace, more than $93,000 being shoved through the windows, some $13,000 more than last year.

Victory Light was last to come out of the electric starting gate. Blenethel, Brazen Hussy and Kissin Kid formed a group out front. Blenethel finally opened a two-length lead. Dohoev, in the meanwhile, was within striking distance, while West took Victory Light to the middle of the track for racing room. Brazen Huzzy disposed of Blenethel to take command.

Dohoev Makes Move

Dohoev, already shut off once along the rail made his move on the inside while Victory Light continued to move up on the outside. Victory Light took the lead as Brazen Hussy quit and partially shut off Dohoev. West kept Victory Light to a hard drive to the wire and Kissin Kid held on to stave off Dohoev's bid for second money.

The daily double paid $18.30 and involved a pair of well played horses. Triphammer, under A. Vessell's handling won the first race by six lengths at a $7 mutuel. Sammy Palumbo rode Redfoot to a lucky victory in the second race. The $5.10 shot was last out of the gate but found racing room on the inside early to get to the front and Palumbo held him together long enough to win by a half length from Royal Wanton.

Nearly Late

Unknown to the legion of bettors, Redfoot arrived at the track only five minutes before the horses went to the post. He has been stabled at Bowie some ten miles from here. The gelding was loaded in a van with ample time for the trip. However, the conveyance broke down 5 miles up the road. The track sent another van which picked up Redfoot and brought him here none the worse for the experience.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED FOOT, $5.10, $3.80, $2.80; ROYAL WANTON, $4.60, $3.10; SQUARE PLAY, $2.60.

RED FOOT, off sluggishly, went through on the inside entering the stretch the first time to take command and was kept to a drive to the end while staving off the closing bid of ROYAL WANTON. The latter was strongly handled while in the thick of contention and hung in the closing test. SQUARE PLAY raced along the rail from the start and was tiring at the end. SHORTS was held safe throughout. MARGIE WRACK quit.

Daily Double, TRIPHAMMER and RED FOOT, Paid $18.30.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place easily. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:08. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NAVIGATION, $7.60, $4.40, $3.30; UNLAWFUL, $10.00, $5.30; REMOLEE, $3.60.

NAVIGATION, going in his best form, set a good pace, turned back the bid of REMOLEE and was kept to pressure to the end. UNLAWFUL, slowest to begin, raced wide and closed with a game rush to be going fastest at the end. REMOLEE raced on the outside and close up, went to NAVIGATION approaching the stretch and weakened in the final test. MORE POISE closed willingly.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:09. Off at 4:10. Winner, C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—VICTORY LIGHT, $66.30, $27.50, $10.30; KISSIN KID, $12.60, $6.60; DOHOEV, $3.90.

VICTORY LIGHT, going in his best form and not hurried early, came around horses to set to serious contention, took command under a drive and held KISSIN KID safe in the closing test. KISSIN KID showed a good effort. DOHOEV was blocked twice in the early stages and came with a rush at the close. BRAZEN HUSSY got to the top and then weakened. REAL MONEY had early speed. WORTHOWNING showed a dull effort.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:44. Off at 4:45. Winner, Gittings Boyce's b. m. (12), by Pillory—Mascarita. Trained by Gittings Boyce. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 2:01.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MY SWEETS, $36.80, $14.40, $6.60; WILD DAY, $29.40, $17.40; RED TRAP, $5.80.

MY SWEETS, steadied while closest to WAR PORT'S pace, went to the front when called upon, drew clear and kept to pressure to the end. WILD DAY went to contention boldly on the outside, was shut off while attempting to go to the inside of MY SWEETS and came gamely in the closing test. RED TRAP closed much ground from a slow start in the closing. NOBLE SCOT closed a sparkling drive. SPEED SHIP was carried wide early.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:17. Off at 5:18. Winner, Mrs. J. M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOAN ASBESTOS, $6.00, $4.10, $3.50; CUPID'S ARROW, $11.50, $7.00; PLAYDEMA, $5.40.

JOAN ASBESTOS went to the front at once, raced CHROMO into defeat, turned back the bid of CUPID'S ARROW and held on gamely. CUPID'S ARROW raced wide to get a forward position, moved up menacingly in the early stretch and hung in the final drive. PLAYDEMA moved up gamely and then faltered. LAST SCAMP started ground while well placed and weakened in the final drive.

Grey Friar 'Cap Won by Get Off In Great Rally

Bunty Lawless Loses By Head in Class C Race at Saratoga

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Eight horses started in the featured Grey Friar (class "C") Handicap of 1 mile as the last week of the meeting got under way here today, but only two of them figured seriously in the running once the field reached the stretch turn. Get Off, from the Circle M Ranch of Mrs. E. S. Moore, won by a head from W. F. Morrissey's Bunty Lawless.

Eight lengths behind came Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin's Strabo to earn the show. The victor, paying $11.70, sped the 8 furlongs in 1:37 flat under Eddie Arcaro. Athelwold, the choice, broke last and ducked out from the outside position. He wound up fifth.

Get Off Rallies

Bunty Lawless had the speed of the field for 6 furlongs. He quickly sprinted into a length and a half lead and proceeded to dispose of no competition. Get Off rallied around the bend and drew up to the pacemaker before rounding for home. It was a nip and tuck duel between these two as they pulled far away from the others. Get Off stuck his head in front but both horses battled tenaciously to the end. Strabo spurted from far back to defeat Volitant for third money.

The attendance was 7,202.

Warren Wright's flashy 3-year-old, Little Risk, ran the fastest 6 furlongs of the meeting in defeating a smart field of fillies and mares in the sixth race. Paying $5.60 for $2, the stimulus lassie won by 4 lengths in 1:10 4-5. W. H. Lipscomb's entry of Tedbriar and Redlin followed the winner home, 3 lengths apart in the order named. Little Risk wore down Redlin after a half mile, then held Tedbriar under control without difficulty.

Three D. C. Men Draw Tough Foes in National Singles

Hunt to Face Jack Kramer In 1st Round

Johnsen Is Pitted Against John Doeg, While C. A. Smith Tackles Talbert

By the Associated Press

Forest Hills, Aug. 26.—The District of Columbia's three unseeded entries in the national men's singles championships starting here Friday each drew a tough first-round opponent as eight of the ten seeded players were scheduled to be on the sidelines during opening matches.

Gil Hunt, jr., ranked ninth nationally and carrying Washington's main hopes for an upset victory, drew as his first foe formidable Jack Kramer, 19-year-old California youngster and one of the game's most rapidly improving stars.

Davie Johnsen, Middle Atlantic champion and a student at George Washington University, will be pitted against the aging but still skillful John H. Doeg, while the District's only other entry, C. Alonso Smith, will face William Talbert, University of Miami ace.

Hunt Favorite

Hunt probably will be the slight favorite over the less experienced Kramer, but both Johnsen and Smith will be distinct underdogs.

Defending champion Bobby Riggs, seeded No. 1 in the draw today, starts from scratch in meeting A. Ronald Lubin, of Los Angeles, in the first round. The seeded player who must earn his way into the second round—Gardnar Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., listed No. 9— faces the task of defeating one of the better non-seeded players, Hal Surface, of Kansas City.

In contrast to the men's singles, only two of the nine seeded players in the women's single drew first-round byes when the pairings were made from the list of 78 entrants in the men's division and 55 in the women's.

McNeill Seeded Second

Riggs was followed in the men's seeding by Donald McNeill, Oklahoma City; Frank Kovacs, Oakland, Calif.; Frank Parker, Altadena, Calif.; Joseph Hunt, Annapolis; Henry Prusoff, Seattle; Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, Atlanta; Elwood Cooke, New York; Mulloy, and S. Welby Van Horn, Los Angeles.

Alice Marble, naturally, topped the women's seeded list. She was followed in order by Helen Jacobs, Berkeley, Calif.; Pauline Betz, Los Angeles; Dorothy May Bundy, Santa Monica, Calif.; Sarah Palfrey, New York; Helen Bernhard, New York; Virginia Wolfenden, San Francisco, and two English girls—Mary Hardwick and Valerie Scott—seeded as foreign entries.

Miss Jacobs and Miss Scott drew first-round byes. Miss Marble is scheduled to meet Barbara Stroubar, of Newtown Square, Pa., in the first round.

Bowden-Isadore Bellis; George Lyttelton Rogers-Alexander Carver.

Indians Read Hometown Pep Messages Here

Rain Defers Local Fight To Tomorrow

Williams, Jannazzo Pronounced in Fine Shape at Weigh-In

Rain yesterday forced postponement of the ten-round match scheduled last night between Holman Williams, of Chicago, and Izzy Jannazzo, of New York, until tomorrow night at Griffith Stadium.

The weather man gave Promoter Joe Turner no encouragement for today or tonight, and Turner decided Wednesday would be the day.

The postponement came as a keen disappointment to both fighters and their managers, but they went through the weighing-in ceremonies at the District Boxing Commission, as did all the contestants in the other bouts. Reweighing is slated for 2 p. m. tomorrow.

Jannazzo came in—just as his manager, Guy Anselmi had predicted—at 146½, while Williams weighed 149. Both fighters looked fit and fight experts and officials gathered at the Boxing Commission's offices, including Commissioners Ernest W. Brown and Thomas P. Morgan, jr., predicted a hot scrap.

Meanwhile Guy Anselmi, Jannazzo's pilot, sent a telegram to Lieut. Col. Harvey Miller, president of the N. B. A., in Lakehurst, N. J., asking that the winner of the bout be given titular consideration. It follows:

"I hereby formally ask you as president of the N. B. A. to recognize the Holman Williams-Izzy Jannazzo match as an elimination when you take action at your convention next month for the welterweight championship of the world. Would appreciate a quick answer, as I have the man who should be the next champion."

Runyan, twice a P. G. A. winner; Jimmy Hines, Jimmy Demaret and Ky Laffoon. And at 72 came the remainder of the par-wreckers—Reggie Myles, Johnny Thoren, Vic Ghezzi, Ben Hogan and Eddie Kirk.

Those who equaled par 73 were Picard, Charles Sheppard, Herman Keiser, Johnny Revolta and Ed Dudley. Dudley shot a dazzling 33 on the first nine but rocketed to a 40 on the way in.

None of the big players were in danger of being eliminated in tomorrow's round. The low 63 players after tomorrow move into match play Wednesday and it seemed tonight that scores of 162 or better would be good enough to turn the trick. Only one player—Champion Picard who is professional of this course—doesn't have to qualify and he will be the sixty-fourth man in the field when the first round of hand-to-hand battling starts.

Snead, the pre-tournament favorite, was out in 39 but cut two strokes from par on the back nine par for a 74. Craig Wood, second choice along with Ben Hogan, had 76.

Few in Danger

Only a handful of great names of golf were in the danger zone. Joe Turnesa had a 77; George Picard, Henry's brother, a 78, along with Bobby Cruickshank and former Champion Leo Diegel; former Open Champion Sam Parks, jr., an 81, and Jim Barnes, winner of the first P. G. A. title in 1916, a 79.

Gene Sarazen, three times a winner, was in the 74 bracket. At 75 were Horton Smith, Harry Cooper, former Open Champion Billy Burke, Denny Shute, twice P. G. A. champion; Ray Mangrum, Jimmy Thomson and Walter Hagen, who has won this tournament five times.

Among the 76 shooters were Dutch Harrison and Byron Nelson, last year's Open champion and runner-up in the P. G. A. to Picard.

It was 3-0 after the Indians went to bat in the third. Ben Chapman beat out a bunt to Sanford with one out, and, with two out, Boudreau and Trosky bashed singles that moved him home.

Twin Killings

The Indians' fourth run stemmed from a single to left by Jeff Heath with two out in the sixth, after George Case had robbed Trosky of an extra-base hit with a running catch in deep center. Ken Keltner hit a lazy fly that dropped safe for a triple near the rightfield line, scoring Heath.

Double plays by the Indians—three of them in the first four innings—wrecked the Nats' early assaults. After Case opened the first with a hit, Lewis hit into a double play. The Nats came up with a run in the third when Case and Lewis led off with singles to left. Welaj scored Case and moved Lewis to third with a single through Boudreau, but with only one out the uprising collapsed. Travis grounded into the box and Harder converted the ball into a double play with a helpful decision by Umpire Geisel at first base that evoked the boos of the slender crowd.

In the fifth the Nats cut the Indians' margin to 3-2 with a run scored on only one hit. Rick Ferrell led off with a single to right and the Indians missed a double play when Boudreau's throw on Leonard's grounder pulled Mack off second base. Ferrell was safe, but Mack retired Leonard at first. Ferrell reached third and Case got to first on a grounder to Boudreau, who attempted to trap Ferrell between the bases, but Keltner had left third uncovered and Ferrell advanced. He scored while Lewis was forcing Case at second.

Cecil Travis narrowed the Indians' lead to 4-3 in the sixth when he opened the inning with his first Griffith Stadium home run of the year—a hoist that landed atop the rightfield wall and bounced into the alley beyond. The sad truth is that was the last hit of the day by the Nats.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

Dutch Leonard was the standout performer for the Nats yesterday despite his defeat, and makes the largest gain in the Man of the Month contest for August. Points were awarded as follows:

To Leonard, seven points, because he held the Indians to four runs and kept the Nats in the ball game with his seven-hit pitching.

To Cecil Travis, four points, because he hit a sixth-inning homer that cut Cleveland's lead at the time to one run.

To George Case, four points, because he singled in his first two times at bat and scored a run, and because he cut off at least one run with his clever catch of Trosky's long drive in the sixth.

To Johnny Welaj, two points, because he drove in a run with his third-inning single.

To Rick Ferrell, two points, because he opened the fifth with a hit and scored. The totals:

St. Elizabeths And Heurich Clash Today

Opening Sandlot Play-Off Game Is Rescheduled

Postponed by rain yesterday, the opening game of the District sandlot playoffs will be held this afternoon when the Heurich Brewers engage the St. Elizabeth's nine on the South Ellipse. Game time is 4 p. m.

The Brewers, defending champions and winners of The Washington Post Industrial League this summer, will be favored to repeat last year's triumph, but in St. Elizabeth will be meeting a team easily capable of extending Heurich to the limit.

By way of defraying expenses for the annual trip to the National Amateur Federation tournament in Birmingham which is awarded the winner, temporary stands have been erected along the baselines and a nominal fee for the seats will be charged.

Eddie Colliflower is expected to toe the mound for the Brewers this afternoon. Colliflower's ability was reflected recently in his shutout of Cameo in the Industrial playoff and Heurich followers are anticipating a repeat performance this afternoon. The winner of this game will play the Government League champion.

Boston Bees Beat Cards, 3-1, at Night

Gutteridge's Homer Is Losers' Lone Run; Strincevich Wins

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 26.—A ninth-inning home run by Don Gutteridge tonight deprived hurler Nick Strincevich of a shutout victory as the Boston Bees defeated the St. Louis Cardinals, 3 to 1, before a crowd of 8,500.

The Bees collected only five hits, but one was a homer by Al Glossop in the first inning, and three more were for extra bases. Doubles by Carvel Rowell and Chet Ross netted the Bees their second run in the fourth frame, and Ray Berres' double, a sacrifice and Glossop's long fly picked up the final run in the fifth.

Strincevich was credited with his fourth win, and his opponent, Morton Cooper, was charged with his ninth loss.

Boys' Playground Swimming Finals Set Tomorrow

The finals for the boys' swimming championships of the city will be held at McKinley Pool at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Approximately 400 boys will compete for honors. The contestants have qualified for the finals by placing first, second or third in an event in the preliminary meets held the first part of this week in each of the municipal pools.

Children from various playgrounds from all sections of the city will compete for the pool nearest their playground. Georgetown and Rosedale are expected to have strong contingents in every event, but they will be closely pressed by Takoma and McKinley representatives. Gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded to winners of first, second and third places in each event.

This final meet brings to a close the summer swimming program under the direction of Max Farrington, superintendent of swimming pools, and the District of Columbia Recreation Department. The program throughout the summer has been comprised of free instruction in swimming to thousands of youngsters from all over the city as well as advanced instruction in life-saving methods.

Isolator, Dusky Fox Only Other Entries In $3,000 Stakes

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 26. William L. Brann's Challedon, regarded as the best horse in training, comes back to the races tomorrow in the thirteenth running of the $3,000 added Whitney Stakes at Saratoga Track.

Only two other horses elected to go with him, and this pair—William Woodward's Isolator and Dusky Fox—were copuled as an entry.

It will be Challedon's first race since he romped home with the Hollywood Gold Cup in California July 27. He is asked to pack 126 pounds tomorrow, the same as Isolator. Dusky Fox, a 3-year-old, will Carry 117. As usual, Jockey Georgie Woolf will have the leg up on the big son of Challenger II.

The winner's share, if all three go to the post, will be $2,725. Challedon probably will be odds-on choice in the betting.

Chase on Mound Against Indians Today, as Usual

Southpaw Ken Chase, the old Indian-baiter, will go to the mound for the Nats today in an attempt to give Washington the edge in the three-game series with the league-leading Cleveland club.

For the past two seasons, Chase has pitched in every series between the Nats and Indians. In his last two starts against the Cleveland club he was the winner.

General Outdoor Advertising

General Outdoor Advertising Co. reported net profit for the June quarter of $539,143, equal after quarterly dividend requirements on 6 per cent cumulative preferred and $4 cumulative class "A" stocks to 63 cents a common share. This compared with net loss of $165,53 in the preceding quarter and profit of $605,12, or 73 cents a common share in the June quarter last year.

Va.-Carolina Corp.

Net sales of the corporation and wholly owned subsidiaries were $19,253,276.94 compared with $16,803,362.71 the previous year.

McKeesport Tin Plate Corporation

McKeesport Tin Plate Corporation reported for the six months ended June 30 next profit of $287,993, equal to 40 cents a share on the common stock, compared with $234,678, or 32 cents, in the comparable 1939 period.

Radio-Keith Orpheum Corporation

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation and subsidiaries, for the 26 weeks ended June 30, reported net income of $220,819 after charges, equal to $1.72 a share on the 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock. No comparable 1939 earnings figures are available, for the company came out of Federal Court trusteeship under the bankruptcy laws only in January of this year, officials said.

Chicago & North Western

The Chicago & North Western Railroad reported a net railway operating income of $1,253,487 for July, compared with $530,965 for July, 1939. The net deficit for the month after fixed charges was $56,833, compared with $776,491 for the same month last year. Net railway operating income for the first seven months of 1940 was $2,145,510, compared with a deficit of $1,104,065 in the same period of 1939. The net deficit after fixed charges was $6,763,368 for the period, compared with $10,056,428 a year ago.

American Smelting

American Smelting & Refining Co. reported for six months ended June 30 net income of $6,405,920 after all charges and excess profits taxes, equal to $2.12 a share on common stock after preferred dividend requirements. This compared with $5,429,674, or $1.68 a common share, in the comparable 1939 period.

Armstrong Cork Co.

Armstrong Cork Co. reported net income of $2,114,655 in the first half of 1940, equal to $1.42 a common share, against $1,520,153, or $1 on common, in the first six months of 1939.

Rock Island Lines

The Rock Island Lines reported July net railway operating income of $1,651,359, compared with $1,283,333 a year ago.

First seven months net railway operating income was $3,196,476, compared with $2,146,387 the corresponding 1939 period.

Largest Labor Shortage Seen In Tool and Die Maker Lines

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
Economic Commentator

Present trends, with the talk of universal military training and quickened production of implements for defense, are changing the emphasis from a chronic alleged surplus of human labor to discussions of shortages in specialized and skilled crafts.

Thus the major depression illusion that the Nation had too many workers is tending to disappear, and there is a growing recognition that leadership in the modern world is closely related to the capacity to produce.

Mr. Rukeyser

As the enlarged defense program was getting under way I queried Jr. Isador Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics and former staff member of the Brookings Institution at Washington, concerning prospective basic changes in the market place for human services.

"It is a little difficult to say," Dr. Lubin responded, "what the effects of the enlargement of the national defense program will be on job possibilities because we do not know at this time in what industries the defense program will be concentrated.

"It is obvious that the defense program will involve a substantial increase in employment in aircraft manufacture and in shipbuilding. Both of these are industries operating at a high level of capacity, as will be indicated by their employment figures. The requirements for aircraft are going to involve considerable expenditures for machine tools, which is another industry already operating at levels well above those which prevailed at any time in the 1920s. In general, it is also fair to assume that there will tend to be a heavy concentration of expenditures in the metal industries for other types of supplies.

"The age distribution in 1930 will indicate that obsolescence has considerably reduced the number of tool makers. We know as a matter of general information that there was virtually no apprentice training in the metal trade from 1930 to 1936. In the fall of 1936 and the beginning of 1937 a need for additional workers was felt in some of these industries, and some apprentices were taken on.

"In a number of establishments the apprenticeship was discontinued in the latter part of 1937 or during the depression of 1938. There is every reason to believe, therefore, that a further substantial expansion in the metal working industries will involve a difficult problem as regards the supply of tool and die makers.

"To the best of our knowledge such individuals actually have been found for existing production requirements, though a number of firms have standing orders with employment services for additional tool and die makers, largely in contemplation of their emerging needs."

In summing up Dr. Lubin declared: "So far as the total amount of employment is concerned, I think it is safe to assume that the defense program will employ about as many people per billion dollars of expenditure as are employed per billion dollars of expenditure on public works, and, indirectly, in the mines and factories and transportation facilities of the country.

"It is necessary to employ approximately half a million men per billion dollars of expenditure. We need also to remember that defense expenditures for pay rolls are going to create an additional demand in the consumer goods industries and are, therefore, going to raise the demand for all types of skilled labor, even though there is a particular concentration of that demand in the metal trades rather than in the construction industry as under the public works program."

Auto Sales 'As Good' As in 1940 Desired

Detroit, Aug. 26 (AP).—Taking a conservative view of the outlook for the motor car industry's 1941 model year, Ward's Automotive Reports in its current issue, says that "the automobile industry will do well to uncover in the year ahead a volume of business as good as that in the model year just concluded."

Last week's output of 23,732 cars and trucks, an increase of slightly more than 3,000 over the preceding week, Ward's says, brings total volume for 1940 thus far to 2,811,082 vehicles, compared with 2,354,444 last year to this date.

Revenue Truck Freight In July Declines 1.8%

By the Associated Press

The American Trucking Association, Inc., said yesterday the volume of revenue freight transported by truck during July fell 1.8 per cent below June, but represented an increase of 17.7 per cent over July, 1939.

It added that 216 reporting carriers in 38 States transported 1,194,434 tons in July, compared with 1,216,748 tons in June and 1,014,483 tons in July, 1939.

Bank Loans Off $6,000,000 During Week

Drop in New York City Overshadows Gains In Other Cities

By the Associated Press

A $6,000,00 decline in commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks in 101 leading cities in the week ended August 21 was reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board.

New York banks alone reduced these loans $12,000,000, and banks in the other 100 cities had increases which failed to offset half of this loss.

For the 101 cities, however, a total of business loans outstanding was $4,455,000,0000, or $517,000,000 more than a year ago.

The board's 10-city member bank condition statement gave the following summary of assets and liabilities on August 21, together with changes for the week and with the same week last year, in millions of dollars:

Private Capital Seen Stymied in Defense Efforts

Pittsburgh, Aug. 26 (AP).—A plea for appointment of a member to the national defense advisory commission to supervise finance and keep private, rather than Government, capital flowing into vital industries was made recently in a statement by Frank R. Denton, president of the Mellon Securities Corporation.

Coupled with the plea was an assertion by the head of the securities sales unit of the billion-dollar Mellon banking empire that under the present setup private investment capital "is stymied and radicals are given the opportunity to demand more Government credit and, eventually, the conscription of capital."

"When this comes," said Denton, "the Government becomes overseer of industry, both employers and employes, and we have taken a short cut to national socialism."

Denton asserted America's industrial system "can build armaments with any government in the world if given the opportunity," but that "industry can't produce and investment capital can't flow into peacetime or emergency expansions if government spends more time devising hobbles than it does trying to encourage business initiative."

Standard Gas Plan to Rid Self Of Unit Approved by SEC

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission gave its approval yesterday to the first step taken by a major system in compliance with the so-called "death sentence" of the Public Utilities Holding Company Act.

The commission found that a plan offered by the $850,000,000 Standard Gas & Electric Co. for disposal of the common stock it owns of San Diego Consolidated Gas & Electric Co., was "fair and equitable."

Standard Gas was one of the nine big systems against which proceedings for geographical integration was begun last spring. It is also one of those against which proceedings for corporate simplification are pending. (The "death sentence" requires a utility holding company to limit its holdings of operating companies to those in contiguous areas.)

Standard Gas proposed to offer to exchange its 99,387 shares of San Diego common, after they have been reclassified into ten times that many shares, to holders of Standard Gas notes and debentures at a rate of 58 shares for each $1,000 face value of the securities.

The commission, noting that Standard Gas had expressed belief its funded debt was excessive, said that the plan "would accomplish the dual purpose of reducing the debt and disposing of the stock."

Standard Gas' offer to end its control of San Diego, a company with $44,000,000 assets operating in the San Diego, Calif., area, is part of a broad program under which it would dispose of all of its West Coast properties and retain only those in the Minnesota-Wisconsin and Pittsburgh areas. It would cut in half the number of States in which the system operates, eliminate some nonutility properties and reduce the funded debt.

The SEC pointed out that its approval of the exchange proposal did not mean that it was approving the system's integration plan filed June 14.

German Bonds Slump on News Of British Raid

Empire Liens Strong, Other Foreign Issues Show Weakness

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 26.—Renewal of intense aerial activity by Great Britain and Germany brought a series of wide fluctuations to foreign dollar bonds today. The domestic list was narrow and generally mixed.

Some obligations of British Empire divisions, notably those of Canada and Queensland, got a fresh start toward higher levels at the resumption of trading and added 1 to around 4 points to last week's substatial rally. Wide open breaks occurred, however, in other sections of the foreign division, presumably on fears the British air force was retaliating with heavy damage in its raiding operations.

Denmark 6s dropped 10⅝ points to 35⅛, Berlin City 6s lost 3¼ at 12, Copenhagen 4½s were 3½ lower at 24½ and losses of 7½ and 6 points were shown by Norway's 4½s at 40 and 4½s at 40, respectively.

Domestic loans up fractions to around a point included Southwest Bell Telephone 3s at 106½, Warner Bros. 6s at 81, Northern Pacific 4s at 68½, Southern Pacific 4½s at 40, Western Union 5s at 67¾, and New York Central 5s at 56¾.

Against these was a formidable list of issues either unchanged at the close or slightly under water. Included were Loews 3½s, Southern Railway 4s, American & Foreign Power, Delaware & Hudson 4s, Goodrich 4½s, and Warren Bros. 6s.

U. S. Governments were 16/32 of a point higher to 1/32 lower.

Total sales of $2,215,100, par value, compared with $3,085,400 last Friday.

Business Highlights

Prepared for The Post by Standard Statistics

Tax Delay Retards Business

An important factor adversely affecting industrial expansion in this country is the failure of Congress to enact legislation permitting an accelerated writedown of new defense plants. While the tax committees in both houses of Congress appear willing to give special amortization privileges to new plant and equipment certified as necessary to the rearmament program, they are delaying action on the measure until the controversial excess profits levy can be written in. For many industries operating close to capacity, this delay is working real hardship. For almost all sectors of the country it means some delay in the purchase of materials, the hiring of labor, and the expansion of production and national income.

Smaller Benefits to Farmers

Earlier indications that the Administration would so arrange things this fall as to get a record volume of benefit funds into the farmers' hands during the September-November period have now given way to evidence that these payments may actually be smaller than last year. If present expectations are fulfilled, payments for the final six months of 1940 should total about $380,000,000, compared with $393,000,000 in the latter half of last year. However, there is an offset in the likelihood that payments in the early months of 1941 will be much larger than has hitherto been expected.

Building Estimates Increased

The building industry appears destined for considerably better things over the rest of 1940. The January-July total of contract awards in the 37 States east of the Rockies was only slightly above that for the like period last year. However, present indications are that there will be a year-to-year increase of 8 per cent or so in the last five months. Construction, which is the direct or indirect outgrowth of our defense program will, of course, account for a big share of the gain. Non-residential contracts, which averaged about $87,000,000 per month in the first seven months, are expected to hit a $98,000,000 rate during the last five, while residential awards are expected to increase from about $119,000,000 per month to around $128,000,000.

Armaments a Major Industry

Plans for at least 60 major Government-sponsored armament plants are now being drawn up. Once in operation, this new arms industry will be geared to a production rate representing a turnover of at least $5,000,000,000 per year, so long as the basic national defense program is incomplete. Construction of these plants will involve an ultimate outlay well in excess of $1,000,000,000. But, even more important is the fact that entirely new industrial areas will be opened up. It is the intention to concentrate these, as far as possible, in the farming regions. To provide the homes, stores, schools, hospitals, and other facilities required by the working forces, huge sums will be spent.

Price Changes Meaningless as Blue Monday Again Rules; 161,740 Shares Change Hands

New York, Aug. 26.—It was blue Monday for the stock market today, only 161,740 shares changing hands on the big board. With the exception of the turnover of the previous Monday, it was the dullest for any full business day since the time of the former World War, or about 24 years ago. Price changes at such a time naturally are uninteresting and meaningless. The composite average edged up 0.05 point and there was only a handful of the more active stocks that closed as much as a point away from Saturday's final prices.

The financial community has thought up every conceivable explanation for the present wave of dullness. The range goes from uncertainty over the war to the guess that traders have left town for the Labor Day holiday. Politics comes in for a share of the blame, taxes are not ignored and there are some who feel there must be a connection between the stock market and business. The two formerly worked along more or less together back in the unenlightened era before red ink stood for all that is noble in national affairs.

If a cheer-meter were used on the various explanations, the chances are that the bogging down of the defense program would rate near or at the top. Certainly that is the subject that claims the major role in discussions in the financial district. Congress has been liberal in appropriating money, at the behest of the President, but the fact remains that we have fewer fighting planes than at the first of the year, that when the Army practiced up-State early this month it had to label trucks as tanks and stovepipes loaded with cans as trench mortars.

It is a case of facing the enemy with blue prints and airplanes on order while in place of actual preparations for defense the attitude in Washington has been to blame industry and continue the attacks on business.

One company, which is purely American, tried for months to sell its product to the American Government but was unsuccessful. The German government was quick to take its product and now the Department of Justice is seeking an indictment against it and is searching it for alleged Nazi influence. Another concern is being sued over contracts carried out in the last World War. The effort is being made to create the impression that airplane manufacturers are not satisfied with 8 per cent profit, when as a matter of fact the companies have been trying for months to find out the bookkeeping methods that will be used in determining their profit.

They still do not know what will be allowed by the Government's auditors as legitimate profit. Then there is the whole question of amortization, which could be cleared up easily but which is tied to the excess profits tax discussion through the insistence of the President. The list is a long one.

Aviations were steady in today's dealings as were the steels, the latter being helped by a rise in the industry's operating rate. Most of the active stocks were in the lower price category, the day's most active stock being Nash-Kelvinator. International Nickel was one of the leaders to lose as much as a point. Anaconda and Kennescott did well in the metal division.

Listed bond trading rivaled in dullness the equity performance today, with the tone steady to firm in most groups of senior securities. Only some of the foreign dollar issues displayed real weakness. United States Treasury issues hardly varied at all, portfolios being kept intact while institutional investors awaited new agency financing. Best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds were in quiet demand.

Speculative railroad securities of the domestic list were fractionally changed, with gains slightly more emphatic than losses. Interest paying bonds showed better inquiry than reorganization issues. Some of the industrial specialties moved sharply higher, possibly in reflection of arms order expectations. The holding company and share privilege groups were idle. Sugar bonds were weak in the commodity group.

Wheat Strong, Other Staples Rise Unevenly

Cotton Futures Firm; Hides, Cottonseed Oil Show Buoyant Tone

By the Associated Press

The main drift was upward in major commodity futures markets yesterday but enough staples lagged to give price lists a spotty appearance.

Wheat at Chicago advanced ⅞ to 1⅛ cents a bushel. Buying represented lifting of hedges by mills on recent flour business and mill purchases to cover distant requirements. Corn added 5/8 to 1 cent.

Cotton moved along evenly at New York, suspectible to small orders either way. The final range was unchanged to 10 cent a bale up.

Strong demand developed for hides and cottonseed oil. Others up included silk and lead.

Copper took a comparatively bad spill and lower prices appeared for Santos coffee, cocoa and sugar.

Business Faces 'Rising Activity, Lagging Profits'

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—Commerce and industry are faced with rising activity but lagging profits this fall, according to a survey by the magazine Banking issued today.

American rearmament efforts will step up industrial output, said the review, but business also realizes "the Government is under the painful necessity of taxing the hide off business in order to pay the rearmament bill."

Declaring that "almost every major business problem awaiting solution at the moment has its roots in the conflict abroad," the magazine compared the present position with that existing during World War Number 1:

"At that time there was no debt limit to worry about, the Treasury could borrow money with an easy conscience and public opinion was tolerant of large profits. There is much likelihood today that profits will be severely curtailed and that defense taxes will get the lion's share of what is left."

Failures Dip Slightly

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—Business failures in the week ended August 22 were slightly fewer than in the previous week, but about equal in number to a year, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. The total was 263, compared with 279 in the previous week and 264 in the like 1939 week.

Pennsy Lists $500,000 Improvement Program

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 26 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Railroad, Buffalo division, announced a $500,000 improvement program today and reported August freight business here 5 per cent above July and 35 to 40 per cent above August, 1939.

The Pennsylvania's improvements include an electrically controlled switch and signal system, additional trackage in its southbound freight dispatching yard and enginehouse improvements at Ebenezer with a new coal wharf at Emporium, Pa.

WELL, IT ALL SEEMS TO TALLY! BOB DISAPPEARS FOR A FEW DAYS! A NEIGHBORING TOWN'S BANK IS ROBBED AND BOB TURNS UP WITH A HUGE BANKROLL! THE NEWSPAPER DESCRIPTION OF THE LONE BANDIT SEEMS TO FIT OUR BOY FRIEND!
THE PAPER SAY HE IS BEING MIDDLE SIZING, IS HAVING BLONDE CURLING HAIR AND IS WEARING SPORTING CLOTHING! IS FITTING BOBBY ALL RIGHT!
IT ALL SOUNDS PLAUSIBLE, BUT I STILL DON'T BELIEVE BOB IS A THIEF!
WELL, YOU WENT IN TO ASK BOB IF HE ROBBED THE BACK-VILLE BANK! WHAT DID HE SAY?
HE-ER-WASN'T IN HIS ROOM! THE LOCAL PAPER WAS ON HIS TABLE, OPENED TO THE FRONT PAGE STORY OF THE BANK ROBBERY! BOB MUST HAVE SEEN IT!
SURE, AND HE IS MAKING HIS GETTING AWAY NOW!
HELLO, FOLKS! NOTICE ANYTHING DIFFERENT ABOUT ME?
WHY, BOB, YOU HAD YOUR HAIR DYED RED AND MOST OF THE CURL IS COMBED OUT OF IT!
SURE, YOU ARE HAVING A NEW SUITS ON!
AND WHY THE DARK GLASSES, BOB? ARE YOU AFRAID OF SOME ONE RECOGNIZING YOU OR-ER-MISTAKING YOU FOR--SAY, A BANK ROBBER?

Today's Radio Highlights

1:45 P. M., WMAL—"America's New Role in the Fashion Picture," as seen by Edna Woolman Chase, Mrs. Harrison Williams, Omar Kiam and Dorothy Shaver, points out that with the fall of France America has become the fashion capital of the world.

3:30, WOL—Bryan Field calls the running of Saratoga's Whitney Stakes.

7, WOL—Time Change: Fulton Lewis, jr., and Wythe Williams are involved in this latest habit-breaker. No sooner does The Post print Mr. Williams' picture and the hours of his broadcasts than, zoom, they're changed. Williams will be heard at 7 each Tuesday and Thursday, while Lewis will be on WOL Mondays through Fridays from 7:15 'til 7:30, 15 minutes later than he has been heard.

7:30, WMAL—James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, follows younger brother Elliot as a contestant on Information Please. Will he have the opportunity to give his forthcoming picture, "Pastor Hall," a plug? Christopher Morley, whose "Kitty Foyle" is to be a film, might do the same thing.

8, WRC, WJSV and WOL—Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, accepts the Republican Vice Presidential nomination at the Salem, Oreg., fairgrounds. Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota and Chairman Joseph E. Martin of the Republican National Committee are the other speakers.

8, WMAL—Dennis Day, that youthful tenor who clipped to radio celebrity is something of a record as soloist on the Jack Benny program, costars with Mildred Bailey on the Musical Americana hour with Raymond Paige's orchestra. Day sings Franz Lehar's "Yours Is My Heart Alone" and Weatherly's "Danny Boy."

Listen! with Glynn

An extremely rare radio event takes place tonight. That's a speech by Senator Charles L. McNary, who, as you may have heard, has chosen this date to make his pronouncement on the proffer of the Republican Party that he be its candidate for the Vice Presidency of the United States. Persistent rumor has it that the Senator fully expects to accept.

As far as can be ascertained at this moment, this will be the third time only that the Oregon Senator has ever spoken on the radio, despite the fact that he's been in the Senate 23 years and in public life for a period considerably longer than that.

The talk is to come over WJSV at 8 p. m., (E. S. T.), from the State Fair Grounds at Salem, Oreg., the Senator's home town. He's titled it "The Pioneer Spirit and the Future."

Senator McNary will be notified of his nomination by Gov. Harold E. Stassen, of Minnesota, the Republicans' keynoter at the Philadelphia convention. Gov. Stassen in turn will be introduced by Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, the chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Italian Press Cautions Egypt Not to Help British Attacks

Don't Join British, GaydaAdvises; R.A.F. Bombs Fascist Bases

By the Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 26.—Italy, through her chief editorial spokesman, advised Egypt today to refrain from aiding British attacks on the Fascist Africa empire and, by way of emphasis, her air force executed its sixth raid of the war against Alexandria, Egyptian base for the British Mediterranean fleet.

"It is necessary to fix positions and responsibilities quite clearly," Virginia Gayda, who often reflects Premier Mussolini's views, wrote in Il Giornale d'Italia.

Gayda charged the British with attacks on Italian Libya from neighboring Egypt and said British talk of threatened Italian attacks on Egypt was an attempt to "drag Egypt into the war."

(Egypt is bound to Britain by a mutual defense pact, but has indicated she will continue a passive ally unless the Italians attempt an invasion.)

"Single Instrument of War"

"England cannot demand and Egypt cannot allow pretended Egyptian neutrality and independence to become more and more every day a protective trenchwork for British preparations . . . against Italian territory in Africa and even against Italy herself," Gayda said.

"By invading and dominating territorial waters, ports, soil, cities and camps of Egypt to make them a single, formidable instrument of war against Italy, Britain is exceeding the military limitations of their alliance."

In an early morning raid, the high command said, "successive waves of Italian planes bombed Alexandria." (Alexandria reports said three moslems were injured in the 90-minute attack.)

Italian submarines operating in the Atlantic have torpedoed and damaged a large British oil tanker, the Italian high command reported.

British air raids on Italian positions in East Africa were said to have killed eight colonists and wounded about 40 persons at Gallabat, injured several civilians at Mogadisco and wounded 15 Askari troops at Combolcia.

R. A. F. Raids Italian Bases

Cairo, Aug. 26 (AP).—The Royal Air Force reported today fires and explosions were set off in heavy raids on Italian air bases and other military objectives in Italian Somaliland, Ethiopia and the western desert.

The communique:

"Bombing aircraft of the Royal Air Force raided military objectives in Mogadisci, Italian Somaliland, registering direct hits on buildings. A number of fires was observed.

"Aerodrome at Dessie in Abyssinia was raided and hangars were bombed. One building was demolished following an explosion and a fire started. All our aircraft returned safely. Direct hits were registered on military buildings in Galabat Metoma during raids there. In the western desert Bardia El Adem was attacked and several direct hits were observed on hangars."

Col. Wetherill Dies After 42 Years in Army

Senior Instructor Of 18th Division, Organized Reserves

Col. Richard Wetherill, U. S. A., a veteran of the Mexican expedition and the World War, died at his home here yesterday after a 42-year career in the Army. He was 63.

WETHERILL

Since June, 1936, he had been on active service in Washington as senior instructor of the Eightieth Division, Organized Reserves. He made his home here at 3718 Morrison street northwest.

Col. Wetherill enlisted in the First Wisconsin Infantry as a corporal during the Spanish-American War. At the end of the war he reenlisted as a private in the Regular Army and rose from the ranks to his position at his death. He was appointed a colonel on October 1, 1932.

During his long career he saw service at many Army posts in the United States and the Philippine Islands. From 1914 to 1916 he was a professor of military science at West Virginia University.

Funeral services will be at 11 a. m. tomorrow in Arlington National Cemetery. The cortege will form at the Fort Myer gate.

Surviving, besides his wife, are five children, Capt. Richard Wetherill, jr., U. S. A., Hawaii; Lieut. Roderick Wetherill, U. S. A., Fort Sill, Okla.; Jerry Gordon Wetherill, of Washington; Mrs. C. B. Dougher, March Field, Calif., and Mrs. H. H. Twitchell, March Field, Calif.

Christian Crusaders Fail To Find Parents a 'Problem'

Convention Parley on 'What Shall I Do' About Them Draws Only 2 While 150 Discuss 'Traits That Make Us Liked'

Parents appear to be no problem to young people here for the twelfth international convention of the Christian Crusaders of the Church of God. They are in session at the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets northwest.

Yesterday morning a conference on "What Shall I Do Abdut My Parents?" drew only two girls, one the daughter of a minister.

Another conference in an adjoining room on "How to Keep From Being Queer?" was attended by about 150 young men and women and a few older ones.

Dr. Carl Kardatzke, professor of education at Anderson College, supported by the denomination at Anderson, Ind., led the latter conference. Those attending checked a list of "Traits That Make Us Liked," adding up their own scores. Nine made from 76 to 78, which is almost the top, and no one went below 40.

Mrs. Ocie G. Perry, of Detroit, led the conference on parents, in which the pleasure problem was foremost in the minds of the girls. It was decided young people should "go with the crowd" as long as its activities did not cross the boundaries of their convictions.

Today, Leland Foster Wood, chairman of the commission on marriage of the Federal Council of Churches, will lead a conference on "Spiritual Foundations of Marirage," and will address a luncheon for married couples.

Ground was broken yesterday afternoon for the new edifice of the Church of God at Sixteenth and Taylor streets. The ceremony, postponed from Sunday, was at 4 o'clock, with Dr. Elber Adcock, secretary of the National Board of Church Extension, assisted by the Rev. Esther M. Boyer, pastor of the local church. Services are now held in the Anacostia Temple of the Junior Order of American Mechanics, on Minnesota avenue southeast.

China is only "first base" in Japan's conquest of Siberia and the Dutch East Indies, Dr. Walter Judd, former missionary to China, told more than 300 delegates last night.

"Millions of eyes are watching America today to see whether our religion has been able to give us character," he said. "We close doors on preaching the Christian gospel in foreign countries because we differ over small things."

Basis of misunderstanding between Japan and this country is that "Japan believes the United States has imperialistic political aims," he said.

Contract Bridge

Mrs. R. W. asks what should South bid with this hand:

♠KQ974
◇863
♣942

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 heart	Double	?

"My husband insists that I should pass this hand, but I think I should say one spade. Who is right?

Contract bridge bidding is largely a matter of opinion, and one player may obtain successful results with methods another would abhor. However, we would side with Mrs. R. W. in this case. It is wiser to put in a spade bid now, while it is cheap, for the bidding may climb too high to show the five-card major suit later. Partner cannot expect much as South would redouble with a strong hand.

Defense Sidelights

2 White River Power Projects Asked in Bill

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, yesterday introduced a bill authorizing the construction of two flood control and power developments on the White River in Arkansas and Missouri at a cost of $79,000,000, in accordance with Army engineers' recommendations.

The measure, which also would authorize the appropriation of the funds, directed that one dam and reservoir be constructed at Bull Shoals, Ark., and the other at Table Rock, Mo.

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated Capt. Aubrey W. Fitch, commander of Patrol Wing 2, aircraft scouting forces, with the fleet and former commandant of the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Fla., to be a rear admiral.

Awarding of $31,769,530 in new contracts for Army supplies was announced by the War Department yesterday.

The largest contract, $16,075,000, for gunpowder, went to the Hercules Powder Co., of Wilmington, Del.

Cleveland, Aug. 26 (AP).—The Atlas Powder Co., with headquarters in Wilmington, Del., will operate the U. S. Army's new shell loading plant to be located on a 15,000-acre tract northeast of Ravenna, Ohio, The News says.

Secretary of the Navy Knox requested Congress yesterday to authorize the appointment of graduates of the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps to the regular Navy.

"It has become apparent," Knox said in a letter to Speaker Bankhead, "that the Naval Academy cannot supply enough permanent officers to meet personnel requirements of the fleet and that other sources must be utilized." A bill embodying the request was introduced by Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, of the House Naval Affairs Committee.

President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday for an additional $53,000,000 to expand the office of education's program of vocational training in courses essential to defense industries.

Fifteen million dollars was appropriated for the program in June, but the President said in a letter to Speaker Bankhead, that this sum would be expended by November 1.

Seattle, Aug. 26 (AP).—Philip G. Johnson, president of the Boeing Aircraft Co., said today the company would concentrate on the production of its B-17 type four-engined bombers and retire from the two-motor field.

The announcement was made while Johnson was escorting William S. Knudsen, National Defense Advisory Commission production expert, and Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Army Air Corps chief, on an inspection of the company's plants here.

Dismissal of Ickes Libel Suit Upheld

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday upheld a decision of District Court dismissing a $750,000 suit against Interior Secretary Harold Ickes, brought by a Texas attorney who contended he was libeled in an official press release.

John D. Glass, of Tyler, Tex., former employe of the Federal Tender Board, which administered the Connally Hot Oil Act for the Interior Department, claimed the Ickes release, issued November 23, 1938, was defamatory to him.

The Court of Appeals held that statements in the release were "for the most part" literally true and that the question was whether such statements were privileged.

War Benefits U. S. Business, Bank Reports

But Defense Program Will Pose Difficult Problems, Paper Warns

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Aug. 26.—The war in Europe, at the close of its first year, appears to have had fewer adverse effects on current business conditions in this country than might have been expected and, on the whole, its influences have probably been stimulating rather than otherwise, the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York declares in the current issue of The Guaranty Survey.

It seems inevitable, however, that the war must eventually bring American business face to face with some of the most difficult problems with which it has ever had to deal, the bank adds.

"Possibly the most far-reaching of the war's indirect effects on business in the United States will be those related to the newly adopted program of preparation for defense, induced by an awakened sense of national insecurity. The expenditure of the huge sums . . . is expected to provide a major stimulation of general business for some years. On the other hand, the program involves a prospect of greatly increased taxation and a mounting load of debt.

More Modest Program

"Immediate attention is being directed to problems of Western Hemisphere defense and economic cooperation. The plan for a huge international cartel to deal in the surplus products of the Americas has apparently given way to a more modest program for financing Latin-American trade and industrial development.

"Agreements reached in the recent inter-American conference at Havana are generally gratifying, although they provide no definite indication of the steps to be taken in meeting post-war trade problems. These preliminary attempts are significant chiefly as indicating a general recognition of the drastic readjustments that are expected to become necessary as a result of the war.

"From the day it began, the war has had a strong influence on economic conditions in the United States. Its first effects were mainly psychological and were most clearly reflected in price movements. There followed a rapid expansion of demand for some American products both on the part of belligerent and neutral countries. This, in turn, has been succeeded by a virtual elimination of most European nations as markets and sources of supply and by the inauguration of the huge defense program at home.

Foreign Trade Gains

"American foreign trade in the war period, despite the grave disturbance of international commerce as a whole, has exceeded the comparable totals a year earlier, and the expansion of exports has been greater than the gain in imports."

U. S. Britain's Ally, Leaflets Tell Berliners

By Percival Knauth.

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Aug. 26.—The British propaganda warfare against the Reich, one of the most potent weapons of which is the bombardment of German cities with leaflets designed to undermine the morale of the people, reached its high point last night when Royal Air Force raiders scattered their printed matter over Berlin.

Judging from remarks that Berliners were making about the text of the leaflets today, however, they do not think much of British propaganda. The text was not available to the press today, which saw only one leaflet, and that one badly crumpled. This was covered with fine print on each side, set up in two columns, setting forth British opinion on Hitler, the outcome of the war and British resources as compared to those of Germany.

The population of Berlin, which the leaflet states had the reputation of being the "brightest" of all Germany, was requested on the title page to realize the futility of their cause. Against Adolf Hitler's 200,000,000 people, the leaflet proclaimed, Britain, with her empire, had 492,000,000 plus a fleet which was "mightier than all those in Europe put together."

Britain, it was stated further, will decide when and how this war ends. The war and Adolf Hitler's reign, the leaflet continued, will end together. Hitler was said to have seriously miscalculated his chances this time.

"The war which he began will continue," it was stated, "until he and the Third Reich go under.

"America was depicted as Britain's ally, with President Roosevelt, William Randolph Hearst and Gen. Pershing in the forefront of her supporters in the United States."

"Hearst," it was stated, "announced that America must join in the fight against the Reich."

It was further stated that 88 per cent of the American people want to take up arms against Germany. "American experts," the leaflet explains ominously, "forecast a famine in which 300,000,000 people will suffer starvation in Europe next winter because of bad crops."

Foreign correspondents were impressed chiefly by its resemblance, both in text and make-up, to the letters of the "Liberty Party" which frequently came in the mail a year or so ago, but which have not put in their appearance since the war began.

Australia Names New Legation Aide Here

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 26 (AP).—Alan S. Watt, 37, today was named first secretary of the Australian Legation in Washington.

He will succeed F. Keith Officer, who is being transferred to Tokyo. Watt, an attorney, was a Rhodes scholar and an associate judge of the Supreme Court.

Petain Scorned Plan to Save Army, Says Cot

Churchill's Proposal Rejected by Weygand, Premier, Says Ex-Aide

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Aug. 26.—When it became apparent that the French could not hold off the German invasion into France, Winston Churchill proposed that the French transport to North Africa an army of 1,000,000 men and its equipment to continue the war, Pierre Cot, former French minister of aviation, said today.

Cot said that the success attained by the British in evacuating 300,000 men from Dunkerque under fire indicated that the removal of a French army to North Africa might have been successful if Marshal Petain and General Weygand had not rejected Churchill's suggestion.

"Petain and Weygand gave our country to Hitler," Cot said. The former French cabinet official arrived in the United States several days ago after having left France a few days before the Franco-German armistice was signed.

Cot gave what he said were official figures showing that while the French air force was insufficient, actually only about a third of the planes available were ever used in the Battle of France.

He said France had about 3,000 first-line planes on hand when the German invasion began. Of those, 1,000 were in North Africa and were not called for or sent into the battle. More than 400 were kept idle at the Italian border, and 300 more planes and their trained pilots sat in complete uselessness behind the Maginot Line.

Asked what, in his opinion, constituted the greatest single reason for the collapse of France's military power, Cot said: "The French generals were 70 or over and they were opposed by German generals of 40. The French high command forgot nothing and learned nothing. It was still thinking of war in the terms of 1918."
